Real Green Pastures And Well Worth Protecting The President's Plan 6,000 Year Old Graves

By Arthur Brisbane

San Simeon, Cal., Jan. 18—Green, level pastures and green, rolling hills along this Pacific coast would delight any farmer on earth just now. Within a short time about 24 inches of rain has fallen, and the white faced Hereford cattle, 10,000 of them, scattered over pastures on this ranch, stand in fresh grown grass well above their hoofs.

Rain is gold along this coast, and there has never been a season better than this for grass, alfalfa, wild oats and other cattle crops.

And this year the national supply of beef cattle, diminished by eighteen million head, thanks to the government, yields a good profit to cattlemen.

On all this round globe there exists no such paradise of earth, air, sunlight and sea as this western coast of the United States. It really would be worth while to have a few airplanes and submarines to protect it.

In one single harbor, at Vladivostok, with the coast of Japan only 450 miles away, Russia has 900 powerful airplanes, and a big fleet of submarines. And now you hear no more talk of a Russian-Japanese war.

Are we poorer than Russia, or only less intelligent?

Details of the President's plan to make times better and STAY better are revealed.

Employment insurance, guaranteeing that if men don't have work they will have money, will be provided by a three-cent tax on payrolls.

The payroll tax, that will gradually increase to 5½ per cent, will cost the national government this year one hundred million dollars, two hundred million in succeeding years. Seventy-five millions will come from the states this year, one hundred and fifty millions in later years.

In all his planning, the President warns against "extravagant action" which might jeopardise a "sound idea."

His plan of pensions for the old does not approach the generosity of Dr. Townsend, who would give $200 a month for life to everybody past 60 years of age, and not a criminal, thus spending for that pension alone more than twenty times as much as the entire national government spent before the war.

Some things even the United States can't afford, although some seem to doubt it.

The President's plan would give $30 a month, not forty as originally stated, to "dependent persons now over 65," and less to the unemployed over 60, under sixty-five.

Old people without money or friends will tell you that $30 a month, that they would actually get, interests them more than $200 a month that the country could not pay, although millions urge the impossible payment, and many officials, fearful for their jobs, advocate the impossibility.

The Roosevelt plan includes government aid for "dependent children" by helping the states to support mothers' pension systems.

Government aid to state and local public health agencies, strengthening federal public health service, is recommended, wisely.

A nation rich enough to afford first-class veterinary service for cows and other animals in labor, might well spend some money to end conditions under which the number of women that die in childbirth in the United States is greater than in any other civilized country on earth.

Dr. Sukenik, professor of archeology in the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, has discovered graves six thousand years old, that go far back of Moses and Job, and others well known.

These graves were dug and filled long before the Jewish nation had made Jerusalem their principal city, when other, earlier races inhabited the site of "Old Jerusalem."

What did those ancients, whose bones are now found, think about before they went into the tomb? They believed, whoever they may have been, that they were the most important people on earth, more interesting to the ruler of the universe than any race.

They believed that all not of their race or religion were inferior creatures to be slaughtered plentifully, that Heaven was created especially for them and Hell for those that differed with them in religion, and ancestry.

And men have not changed very much since those funerals of six thousand years ago.

Melrose, Newton Win Garden Hockey Tilts

Melrose and Newton, two of the favored teams in the Greater Boston Interscholastic League hockey race, advanced a step further towards championship honors by one-sided victories at the Boston Garden.

Harold Poole's strong Melrose entry defeated an outplayed Stoneham team, 4-1.

Newton walloped Rindge Tech 4-0.

Both victories were well deserved. Melrose produced two goals in each of the opening two periods.

De Coste opened the scoring, on a pass from Shaw, midway through the first period. Priestly making an unassisted goal a minute later.

De Coste and Shaw both banged home hard shots for goals on unassisted plays in the second period.

Newton scored twice in each of the first and third periods. Castoldi took passes from MacLeod for the opening period scores.

MacLeod again passed to Marr for the third score followed by a final unassisted effort by Herrick.

Watertown defeated Wellesley 6 to 2 in one Bay State League engagement at the Boston Arena.

Waltham lost in an upset to the strong Framingham group 4 to 2, in another.

CURLEY Sees Aid For YARD

$4,000,000 FOR CHARLESTOWN

Governor Curley announced today that he would appoint Neal J. Holland of Dorchester, former member of the Boston board of assessors, to the Finance Commission post declined by Edward D. Hassan.

He also announced he fully expects federal funds for a public works program that may mean the expenditure of $80,000,000 in Massachusetts.

Features of this program—a major step toward the fulfilment of the Governor's campaign pledge of "Work and Wages"—are:

Building of a "glorified Atlantic City boardwalk" at Nantasket beach for $1,000,000.

Speeding up the work on the Cape Cod canal project so that it can be completed in two years, instead of four.

$135 HOLDUP Girl Is Victim

Within a few paces of police headquarters, a gunman today held up the cashier of the E. C. Schirmer Music Co. of 221 Columbus avenue, the Back Bay, and made off with $135—what was left of the firm's payroll.

Walking past 15 employes of the firm, the gunman felled Melvin Jaquith, 22, of 124 Coolidge street, Brookline, a shipper, in the cashier's cage with a revolver blow.

Jaquith had failed to obey his command:

"Don't move!"

Turning his gun on Miss Lucille McMillan, 21, of 71 Douglas road, Belmont, the cashier, he tossed a brief case in front of her.

"Put that money in that bag," he commanded.

She slipped $135 into the case, having already distributed the bulk of the firm's pay envelopes.

Other Hauptmann Trial Stories on Pages 2 3 and 5

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's chief counsel, Edward J. Reilly, revealed today what he says will be one of the "big surprises" of the Hauptmann defense next week.

Reilly said he would show that Isidor Fisch, the dead furrier, attempted to leave the shoe box containing $14,600 Lindbergh ransom money found in Hauptmann's possession with three other persons before he finally left it with the defendant.

"I will produce at the trial three persons with whom Fisch tried to leave the shoe box containing the ransom money and a suitcase before Fisch left for Germany," Reilly declared.

"These three persons are members of respectable families. This evidence will be of such a character that it cannot fail to impress the jury."

The defense lawyer would not reveal the names of these three "surprise witnesses" at this time.

Hauptmann claims Fisch, a furrier with whom he had been associated in business, left a shoe box in his safekeeping before Fisch sailed for Germany where he died.

Hauptmann claims he had no idea until three weeks before his arrest last September that the shoe box was loaded with Lindbergh ransom money.

Reilly said that in addition to showing Fisch was trying to get rid of this "hot money" he will bring out some "surprising things" about Fisch's business affairs and

'Almost Forgotten'

KIDNAP LADDER FIGHT TO RESUME

Battled as Evidence

KEPT OUT BEFORE BECAUSE IT HAD BEEN TAKEN APART

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—The state rescued the Lindbergh kidnap ladder today from its place as an almost—but not quite—"forgotten figure" in the Hauptmann trial.

State's attorneys, nearing the end of presentation of their case, said they would try again early next week to "get the ladder in" as evidence against Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Seventeen days ago Attorney-General David T. Wilentz told the jury he would show them in due course that Hauptmann built the ladder, using in parts of it, wood from his home in the Bronx; that he carried it to Hopewell for the kidnaping; that it cracked and he fell with the baby in his arms.

Soon after the trial began, the state brought the ladder into court and sought to have it introduced in evidence.

The defense objected, after witnesses said it had been taken apart for examination.

Hauptmann's attorneys said it must be shown to have a connection to him and proof must be offered that it is in the condition it was when found abondoned seventy feet from the Lindbergh home.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard agreed that the State must show that the ladder had been restored to its original condition.

The State, then, seemed to lose all interest in the ladder. Days of testimony on other phases of the case passed.

Finally it was brought back to the court room yesterday.

The metallurgist, Stanley R. Keith, who has an interesting story to tell of modern sleuthing with a few ordinary nails as clues, took the stand but said only that after he got through with the nails he turned them back to the State police.

With Keith's statement and prior corroborating testimony by state police officers that the ladder nails had been put back, some of the state counsel expected the attorney general to renew the efforts to obtain introduction.

Wilentz excused Keith, however, without making his motion, indicating that the expert would be heard from again.

Later an ordinary carpenter's plane was singled out, from among tools found in Hauptmann's garage workshop and introduced in evidence.

BRUNO At Kidnap SCENE?

NEW WITNESSES TO SO TESTIFY

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—The picture of Bruno Richard Hauptmann lurking about the Lindbergh estate at the time of the kidnaping will again be placed before the jury by prosecution witnesses as the state drives home the final evidence in its case against the tight-lipped German carpenter.

New Jersey, it was learned today, plans to keep two parallel lines of testimony as it winds up its case.

"It will harp away on the theme of "money, money, money" in an effort to show Hauptmann got all the $50,000 ransom, and it will keep bringing up testimony that Hauptmann was near the scene of the crime.

Millard Whited, Sourland Mountain lumberman, will be the first witness to place the Bronx carpenter at Hopewell, when the trial resumes on Monday, it was learned.

Whited is one of several witnesses on whom the state relies for additional proof that Hauptmann was in the vicinity of the Lindbergh home.

Identities of the full list of witnesses on this point has never been revealed, but it is known that Ben Lupica, a Princeton University student, and Frank Rossiter, a theatrical booking agent, will identify the Bronx ex-convict as the man they saw near the Sourland Mountain estate.

Bruno to Take Stand For Full Day

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—Bruno Richard Hauptmann relaxed in his cell today, his pent-up emotions relieved by the twin outbursts of anger, from his wife and himself, against state witnesses.

He started his double-day recess from court by talking with his wife through the screen door of his bull pen—talking of their baby Manfried, of the same age as was the Lindbergh baby when he died.

The jail regulations were lifted to permit Bruno and Anna to meet for ten minutes last night, and as they chatted through the grating both were in a cheerful mood.

Mrs. Hauptmann said her husband—"always proud of me"—was just as proud after she shouted yesterday, "You are lying!" to a former neighbor, emulating the cry of her husband the day before to another state witness, "You eton lying!"

Guards said Hauptmann was eating regularly again and appeared to be in a calm state of mind.

His chief counsel, Edward J. Reilly, said Hauptmann would get his own day in court next week, asserting the defense probably will open its case Wednesday, with Hauptmann as first witness.

"I expect that he will be on the stand under direct and cross-examination," Reilly said, "for about one day."

JUDGES ROBELESS IN GOLD PARLEY

By Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 19—Nine Supreme Court justices—minus their black robes—were expected to gather today in a plain basement room of the Capitol to seek agreement on the $69,000,000,000 "gold clause" cases.

Behind doors zealously guarded, the court—if it follows its regular schedule—will engage in informal discussion on the cases which pose the question whether the New Deal monetary structure is reared on good legal bedrock or the sands of unconstitutionality.

Whether or not a decision could be reached today, the world must wait a while for the public announcement.

his general reputation in New York.

Reilly says he will prove that Hauptmann and Fisch were closely associated in the fur business and that the police now have in their possession 1000 pelts, which had been owned jointly by the pair.

"They (the police) found all kinds of skins in Hauptmann's home," said Reilly.

The defense layer said he would show that Fisch had a reputation as a buyer and seller of questionable furs.

He said he would show that Fisch was known to be a medium for exchanging property whose ownership was uncertain. If Reilly can put this point across to the jury it will be extremely significant.

Denies Split With Fisher

The defense will also try to prove that the kidnaping, March 1, 1932, was a gang job.

That Fisch was an active "finger man" of the mob.

That the body of the Lindbergh baby was dumped by the gangsters at Mt. Rose, near the Lindbergh home, not earlier than May 9, 1932.

The names of some of Fisch's gang associates are known and will be spoken in court Reilly said.

Reilly intimated that he and Associate Counsel C. Lloyd Fisher have "buried the hatchet" when he declared:

"I want to say about all these discussion reports that there has never been anything real of that kind.

"Lawyers may disagree on points of law, you know, but we have not had any personal disagreements."

Fisher had opened his office to his three associates for the press conference but was not present himself.

Reilly, acting as defense spokesman, said:

"In the absence of any better evidence than the state has so far shown, we shall move with hopes of success for a directed verdict of not guilty before we open our case Wednesday morning next.

"If we present our side, Bruno Richard Hauptmann will take the stand as No. 1 defense witness and we shall probably keep him there on direct examination one full day.

"When the State finishes with cross examination, Anna Hauptmann will follow her husband and testify for from two to three hours.

Reilly revealed that one source of defense embarrassment and woe is a lack of available funds, which will compel them to cut down the number of their witnesses drastically.

"Of the 50 or more witnesses we should like to call, we shall probably call less than 40, or maybe only 35," he said.

"This is solely due to the deflated state of the defense purse."

Commenting on a noticed incident of Thursday, when Counsel Fisher strode out of the courtroom just before Hauptmann made his historic outburst, Reilly said:

"The incident had no such significance or the one given it. I take it a man has a right to look sore, without it necessarily meaning anything more than that he has a face that looks sore.

"And a man surely has a right to walk out of a room at any time he pleases. There is no point to all this talk."

Jury on Walk

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—The Hauptmann jury enjoyed a walk shortly before they had their luncheon today. They were the object of much interest as they trudged down the main street, preceded and followed by their deputies.

The afternoon the jury was taken on a bus ride over a route designated by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard—a route carefully avoiding any of the scenes of the crime.

They were warned not to go in the vicinity of the former home of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh near Hopewell.

Anna Dall, New Spouse Hide on Honeymoon

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19—Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger were on a brief honeymoon today, believed to be secluded somewhere in Westchester County.

Boettiger and his bride, the former Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the President, vanished after their surprise wedding yesterday.

It was reported, however, that they were at the Westchester Country Club at Harrison, N. Y., for the weekend.

Boettiger, former Chicago newspaperman, is attached to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association and it was considered likely he will return to New York early next week.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave little information concerning the plans of her daughter and new son-in-law beyond saying they would reside in New York.

There was some belief the newlyweds may take up residence at President Roosevelt's New York home at 49 East 65th street. Several months ago there was a "For Rent" sign on the house.

Mrs. Boettiger's two children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, are at present living at the White House.

4 KILLED IN N. Y. GUN BATTLES

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19—Three gun battles, in which police took part, left four persons dead today.

Patrolman James M. J. Killian was shot to death in a holdup of a leather goods store at Fifth avenue and 45th street. Four holdup men were captured.

Albert Musgrif, taxicab driver, was killed in Brooklyn when two policemen exchanged shots with three gunmen who had forced Musgrif to drive them away from a holdup. The trio surrendered.

At a Long Island city elevated station, Joseph and Samuel Farugia, brothers, resisted arrest as vagrants. They started shooting. Police returned the fire and Joseph Farugia was killed. His brother, wounded, threatened to kill himself if police aproached, and as one patrolman did so, placed his gun against his head and fired. He died later.

The brothers, on parole from Connecticut State Prison, were wanted for the murders of Ernest Krahenbuehl and Patrolman Lawrence Ward, and the shooting of Patrolman William F. Brennan here last Mayy.

GUN CURB TO BALK CRIME ASKED BY DEVER

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever said in a radio broadcast last night he would recommend state control in the issuance of gun permits as a first step in his fight against organized crime.

He spoke over station WBZ during a program sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser. He paid tribute to Publisher William Randolph Hearst for his fight against racketeers and gangsters. Dever said:

"I am heartily in favor of the Hearst campaign to end crime. The pictures depicting the end of the criminal in his nefarious enterprises published by the Boston Sunday Advertiser show the sordid side of crime.

"These pictures have brought the realization of the menace of crime closer to the American people."

HUNTED EX-EMPLOYES IN HOLDUP

Two former employes of the Shepherd Worsted Mills, Newton, a man and a woman, were sought today as attaches of the band of five bandits who escaped with an $8300 payroll from the mill yesterday.

The woman, polics believe, was the person who outlined the theft, pointed out who would have the money and when it would be at the plant.

The man being sought, according to the police, was recognized by workers as the driver of the bandit car. He had been discharged from the mill, as had the woman.

The names of both were being carefully guarded. Police declared that they barely missed the pair in a raid in Boston early today.

GEM THIEVES Get $1600 Loot

Worcester, Jan. 19—While two patrolmen stood less than 100 yards away two thieves broke the window in the F. A. Knowlton jewelry store today and escaped with $1600 worth of diamonds and watches.

The robbery took place directly in front of City Hall.

Hundreds of persons saw the men hurl a brick through the store window, scoop up their loot and flee.

HAUPTMANN INCOME UNDER FIRE

FREE or Dead in MONTH

HAUPTMANN'S EXTREME FATE

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—Bruno Richard Hauptmann may be a dead man within a month, if convicted of the murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Or, conceivably, he may be a free man within the same period of time.

These are the extreme possibilities confronting the old-world criminal, who paced his cell in Hunterdon County jail here today.

Death quickly, or freedom, are only remote possibilities, however, not probabilities.

Under New Jersey statutes a man convicted of murder, without recommendation from the jury, can be sent to the electric chair within 48 hours after the verdict is read.

Thus, if the trial here ends in three weeks, as a consensus of opinion from counsel for the state and defense say it will, it is possible Hauptmann may be a dead man by the middle of February.

The prisoner will go free only if he comes through with an explanation which will completely exonerate him from any connection with the Lindbergh murder or ransom.

3 Outcomes

Here, briefly, are the possible outcomes of the trial:

1—Acquittal. In this event, Hauptmann would be taken back to New York, to await trial for the $50,000 Lindbergh extortion for which he is under indictment there.

2—Hung jury. There would have to be a retrial.

3—Guilty of murder in the first degree. Death is mandatory unless the jury recommends life imprisonment, in which event the defendant cannot be executed.

If convicted, however, Hauptmann would have the right of taking an appeal on an error. If the appeal was made and granted, a new trial would be ordered.

HEAD OF WELLESLEY TO RETIRE IN 1936

Ellen Fitz Pendleton, sixth president of Wellesley College, will retire in June, 1936. The trustees of the college today announced they had regretfully accepted her resignation.

It will mark the 50th anniversary of her graduation from Wellesley and the 25th of her election to its presidency.

Miss Pendleton was born in Westerly, R. I., August 7, 1864, and entered Wellesley in 1882. Except for a short time spent in study in England, she has been on the faculty since her graduation.

BROOKLINE MAN To Wed in New York

A marriage license was issued today in New York to Gessner G. Hawley, 29, of 202 Rawson road, Brookline, and Miss Frances Weaver, of Shreveport, La.

The couple will be married in the Little Church Around the Corner on Monday afternoon.

Hawley is a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1927 and is a chemist.

GLORIA VISITS Mother Again

New York, Jan. 19 (INS)—Gloria Vanderbilt rolled up in the Whitney Rolls-Royce today with a nurse, three week-end bags and a dog, to see her week-end mother, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, under the terms of the court order as to her custody.

For the first time since the week-end visits to her mother were fixed by court order, she was not accompanied by detectives.

WHIPPED AT POST In Zero Blasts

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 19 (AP)—Stripped to the waist in below-freezing temperature, three youths who beat and robbed a farmer were given 10 lashes each at the whipping post today in the small yard behind the boiler house of the New Castle County workhouse.

RELIEF DRIVE SWELLS TO $520,612

The $4,000,000 goal of the Emergency Campaign of 1935 passed the one-eighth mark today when new subscriptions brought the total to $520,612.14.

Larger subscriptions today included: Miss Grace M. Edwards, $10,000; Anonymous, $3000; Anonymous, $3935; Anonymous, $5000 and Mrs. Lester Leland, $2000.

The campaign will be aided by the auto show tomorrow. The directors of the exhibition have voted to give the net proceeds from Sunday to the campaign.

STATE TO PRODUCE BANKING AND BROKERAGE ACCOUNTS

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Flemington, N. J., an. 19—Bruno Hauptmann's own bookkeeping will be the focal point of the State's next attack in the battle to send him to the electric chair for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Hauptmann was a careful bookkeeper, it was disclosed today, especially as far as his expenditures were concerned. His books and ledgers are vague on the subject of income, however.

When Hauptmann's trial is resumed Monday the state will produce an array of exhibits of banking and brokerage accounts, as well as the defendant's own records.

They will attempt to show that Hauptmann had an income which can be explained on no reasonable basis except that he was the recipient of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

Go to Jail

Today Hauptmann's lawyers planned to visit him in his cell in the Hunterdon County jail and take with them the vast array of state exhibits dealing with Hauptmann's accounts.

It was for the purpose of giving the defense an opportunity to study these exhibits that Justice Thomas W. Trenchard ordered the adjournment until Monday.

The state is undertaking to prove that from April 2, 1932—the date the ransom was paid—until September 15, 1934, when Hauptmann was arrested, there passed through his hands a total of $49,907 for which he cannot account.

Hauptmann kept a meticulous account of his expenditures. Up to April 2, 1932, he maintained an amazingly accurate day book and ledger system. And from time to time—in big own handwriting—there is his estimate of what he is worth. This estimate has been checked and found to be accurate.

These records were made prior to the time the $50,000 ransom was paid by Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, the Lindbergh intermediary.

Expenses Probed

The detail with which Hauptmann kept his accounts was rather lax after April 2, 1932, according to attorneys for the state.

The state says he has credited himself with funds, the source of which are not explained.

Back of the state's carefully prepared campaign to trap Hauptmann through his own records is an interesting story in which figures Frank J. Wilson, special agent of the intelligence unit of the revenue bureau.

They even got experts to figure the total of Hauptmann's rent payments; they figured within a negligible fraction what he spent in the operation of his automobile; they figured out the cost of the maintenance of himself and his wife, Anna, and thereafter the cost of the birth of their child, Manfried, and the added cost of maintaining the baby.

They figured out the approximate cost of Hauptmann's hunting and fishing trips and the cost of his wife's trip to Europe.

In brief, they figured out with painstaking care every cent Hauptmann spent on household expenses and his losses on the stock market as well.

The state figures it can inferentially establish that Hauptmann possessed $49,907, or all but $93 of the Lindbergh ransom. This amount includes the $14,600 found on the Hauptmann premises and which is now in evidence at the trial.

FAWCETT MUST GIVE UP BRUNO RECORDS

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 19—James M. Fawcett, former counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, must turn over certain books and papers relating to the Hauptmann case to Edward J. Reilly, present counsel for Hauptmann, the appellate division decided today.

The court's order referred to books, papers and information which, it is held, may be of aid to Hauptmann's attempt to clear himself of the charge of murdering the Lindbergh baby for which he is now on trial in Flemington, N. J.

Fawcett retained possession of the articles because of a lien based on his claim that he has not been fully recompensed for legal efforts in Hauptmann's behalf immediately after the Bronx carpenter's arrest.

The court stipulated:

"The respondent (Fawcett), however, shall not be deemed to have waived his lien upon or his rights in and to said books and papers or any claim for services and expenses he may have against appellant (Hauptmann) or any other person."

HAUPTMANN TRIAL HAS MANY A ONE

Many Illustrated on Page 5

By the Associated Press

MONDAY, JANUARY 14

ATTORNEY-GENERAL WILENTZ: "Who was the man you saw that March (1932) night in the (Bronx) railroad station who you say was closely watching Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon?"

MISS HILDEGARDE OLGA ALEXANDER, dress model: "I say the man was Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY-GENERAL LANIGAN: "From your examination of the conceded writings of Bruno Richard Hauptmann and of the ransom notes, can you say who wrote the ransom notes?"

JOHN F. TYRRELL, handwriting expert: "The writers are identical. If Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote the conceded writings, then Richard Bruno Hauptmann also wrote the ransom notes.

LANIGAN: "All of the ransom notes, sir?"

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16

HARRY M. CASSIDY, handwriting expert: "There is no doubt in my mind but that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes."

HAUPTMANN (in answer to a recess question of what he thought of the handwriting testimony): "I wasn't listening. I was sleeping most of the time."

THURSDAY, JANUARY 17

THOMAS H. SISK, Department of Justice operative: "We questioned Hauptmann as to that jug (in which some ransom bills were found). He denied knowing anything about it, but the next day when we questioned him he admitted that he had that money in there three weeks before he was arrested."

HAUPTMANN (leaping to his feet and taking a step menacingly toward the witness): "Mister, mister, you stop lying. You are telling a story."

JUSTICE TRENCHARD: "One moment. Let me suggest to the defendant that he keep quiet. If he has any observations to make, let him make them quietly through counsel."

STATE TROOPER STOCKBURGER (yanking Hauptmann violently back into his chair): "Shut up, and sit down."

C. LLOYD FISHER, associate defense counsel (putting arm about Hauptmann): "Richard, keep cool. Don't let these guys get you. We'll take care of you."

HAUPTMANN (to Fisher): "Lloyd, that Sisk—he lie like hell. I had to get up and say so."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 18

ATTORNEY-GENERAL WILENTZ: "Did you see Hauptmann about the time of the kidnaping?"

MRS. ELLA ACHENBACH (Bronx neighbor of the Hauptmanns): "Yes. Anna Hauptmann came to my front porch and told me they had just come back from a trip."

MRS. ANNA HAUPTMANN (interrupting from her spectator's seat): "Mrs. Achenbach, you are lying!"

JUSTICE TRENCHARD: "This is the second time this thing has happened. This woman who made this outburst is, I understand, Mrs. ——"

EDWARD J. REILLY, defense counsel: "The defendant's wife, yes."

JUSTICE TRENCHARD: "Well, madam, don't you see the impropriety of your interrupting this trial in an outburst of this kind?"

MRS. HAUPTMANN: "I am sorry, Your Honor, but I could not help it."

JUSTICE TRENCHARD: "You see that it was wrong, do you not?"

MRS. HAUPTMANN: "Yes, I see it."

Mrs. Hauptmann Gay After Court Outburst

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—Going home over Flemington's ice-clad streets after a visit to the jail, Anna Hauptmann is a surprisingly human person.

She laughs a little as she slips on the ice, lapses into German, and pulls her collar against the wind.

Men and women who saw her in court, rising to denounce her former employer as a liar, would hardly recognize her. A friend whom she addresses as "Karl," has come down to give her some encouraging words; she is eager to talk, and almost gay.

From her knowledge of English it is apparent that half of the trial goes over her head—she doesn't know the words.

Someone asked if her outburst yesterday was "staged." She did not understand "staged." But when the word "planned" was offered, she replied:

"Plan? How could I plan it? I didn't know she was coming."

"She" was Mrs. Ellen Achenbach, who told the court she saw Hauptmann limping a day or two after the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

"He never limped," Mrs. Hauptmann asserted. "If he had limped I wouldn't have jumped up. Mrs. Achenbach and I will never be friends again."

Asked about her husband's reaction in court she replied:

"My husband is always proud of me."

'Open House'

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—The Hunterdon county courthouse got a one-day respite from the Hauptmann trial crowds today.

But tomorrow it's "open house," as Rotary club members offered to act as guides for Sunday sightseers. The sheriff accepted the offer.

There was no session and no admittance to the court today, yet the curious still came, if only to see the church-like old building.

TELLS BROWNING 'KILL' COMPLEX

In Will Fight

FELT HE WOULD BE PRESIDENT, SAY NURSES

New York, Jan. 19 (INS)—The late Edward W. ("Daddy") Browning was irrational on many occasions for several weeks before he died on Oct. 12, witnesses testified today in the surrogate court's inquiry into the validity of the second codicil to the eccentric realtor's will.

Browning feared kidnapers, threatened to kill people and was visited by illusions during his last illness, according to the testimony.

"He would have an idea he was something very big and that he was going to be President of the United States," testified Mrs. Orline Lane, one of his attending nurses. "He was going to give us all big jobs."

"Did he ever talk of killing kidnapers?" asked Surrogate James A. Delehanty of Mrs. Ray Usprich, another nurse who attended Browning.

"He was always talking of killing people who did things he did not like," the witness replied. "Once he threatened to kill me when I changed the sheets on his bed."

On another occasion, the witness said, Browning ordered the guards strengthened outside the house in Scarsdale, N. Y., where he was staying. He ordered somebody to go outside and "kill 'em."

An attendant went outside and shot off a shotgun to satisfy the patient. This occurred on the day before the codicil was signed on Oct. 1, it was testified.

The multi-millionaire also complained of "people standing outside the window."

Dorothy "Sunshine" Hood, adopted daughter of Browning, and her husband, were in court.

"Peaches" Heenan Browning, estranged wife of Browning, was termed unaffected by the court action as she inherited only dower property rights in the estate.

PENSION Revolt FEARED

MORE LIBERAL SUMS SOUGHT

By Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 19—The Democratic leadership sought today to head off any "revolt" against major features of the Roosevelt social security program.

While Capitol Hill saw signs that some Democrats would join with some Republicans in fighting for more liberal benefits for the unemployed and the aged, administration leaders studied a declaration by the President that he saw no reason why states should not make the pensions for those now old and needy higher than $30 a month.

Though he said that sound financing required the federal government to limit its part of the contributions to $15, he indicated a belief that states might, if they desired, chip in more than that sum.

While Republicans, as a group, withheld comments pending meetings at which they will discuss their stand, the President sought quick action by Congress.

He said yesterday he hoped the legislation would go through quickly so state legislatures—44 of which are meeting now will be in session—can go ahead with their share of the program.

The House ways and means committee and the Senate finance committee plan to hold hearings early next week.

Besides Senator Borah (R.-Ida.), who had previously objected to the $15 federal contribution as inadequate, Senator Long (D.-La.) voiced opposition yesterday.

Calling for $30 or $40 a month Long said:

"All the people would get that would do 'em any good under that $15 plan could be put in your right eye."

Difficulties arose in another quarter when Chairman Connery (D.) of Massachusetts of the House labor committee made clear that he planned to go ahead and hold old age pensions hearings despite the fact that the administration's Wagner-Lewis bill had been referred to the ways and means committee.

Connery said his committee, members of which are protesting against being ignored, would aim at an old age plan "more satisfactory to the people."

An attempt to supplant the administration plan with the Townsend bill for $200 a month is planned by Representative McGroarty (D.) of California.

Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) and Secretary of Labor Perkins are expected to appear before congressional committees next week to explain the administration's plans.

Speaker Byrns today reported finding in the House a "general disposition to go along with the administration" on its social security legislation.

The President and House Democratic leaders have agreed on a resolution, to be introduced Monday, giving the President free power to administer $4,000,000,000 for work relief and $880,000,000 for the transition from the dole to jobs.

ROOSEVELT ON the League of Nations

AGAINST

Addressing the New York State Grange at Albany in February, 1932, Franklin D. Roosevelt, then Governor of New York and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, said of the League of Nations:

"In common with millions of my fellow countrymen, I worked and spoke in 1920 in behalf of American participation in a League of Nations, conceived in the highest spirit of world friendship for the great object of preventing a return of world war. For that course I have no apology to make.

"If today I believed that the same or even similar factors entered into the argument, I would still favor America's entry into the League, and I would go so far as to seek to win over the overwhelming opposition which exists in this country today.

"But the League of Nations today is not the League conceived by Woodrow Wilson. It might have been, had the United States joined. TOO OFTEN THROUGH THESE YEARS ITS MAJOR FUNCTION HAS BEEN, NOT THE BROAD OVERWHELMING PURPOSES OF WORLD PEACE, BUT RATHER A MERE MEETING PLACE FOR THE POLITICAL DISCUSSION OF STRICTLY EUROPEAN POLITICAL NATIONAL DIFFICULTIES. IN THESE THE UNITED STATES SHOULD HAVE NO PART.

"The League has not developed through these years along the lines contemplated by its founders, nor have the principal members shown a disposition to divert the huge sums spent on armaments into the channels of legitimate trade, balanced budgets and payments of obligations.

"American participation in the League would not serve the HIGHEST PURPOSES FOR THE PREVENTION OF WAR AND A SETTLEMENT OF INTERNATIONAL DIFFICULTIES IN ACCORDANCE WITH FUNDAMENTAL AMERICAN IDEALS."

FOR

Addressing the Woodrow Wilson Foundation at Washington in December, 1933, less than a year after his inauguration as President Franklin D. Roosevelt said of the League of Nations:

"Through the League directly, or through its guiding motives indirectly, the states of the world have groped forward to find something better than the old way of composing their differences.

"The League has provided a common meeting place; it has provided machinery which serves for international discussion, and in very many practical instances it has helped labor and health and commerce and education, and, last but not least, the actual settlement of many disputes, great and small, among nations, great and small.

"TODAY THE UNITED STATES IS MORE OPENLY CO-OPERATING IN THE FULLER UTILIZATION OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS MACHINERY THAN EVER BEFORE.

"I believe that I express the views of my countrymen when I state that the old policies, alliances, combinations and balances of power have proved themselves inadequate for the preservation of world peace. The League of Nations, encouraging as it does the extension of non-aggression pacts, of reduction of armament agreements, is a prop in the world peace structure."

PRISON BREAK BALKED AT CONCORD

An attempt at a wholesale prison delivery was balked at Concord Reformatory today.

Prison guards discovered a 10-foot tunnel leading from the west wing of the institution.

The tunnel had been projected as far as a brick wall, part of which had been removed. Guards found a steel bar that had been used.

The work was believed to be that of a single man, "covered up" by comrades.

One inmate was placed in solitary confinement as a result of the discovery.

He is Claude W. Glenn, 21, of Paterson, N. J., sentenced in Middlesex Superior Court June 4, 1932 to six years for breaking and entering in the night-time.

The tunnel is large enough to accomodate scores of escaping men.

Officer Kills Pal and Self

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 19—Two policemen from the West 30th street station went to lunch together today.

Before the meal ended, one had shot and killed the other, then committed suicide.

Patrolman John J. Masterson was the slayer-suicide, officers said.

As he and Patrolman John J. Hopkins sat eating, an argument arose. Other patrons heard Masterson cry:

"You can't get away with that."

He drew his service pistol, fired. A bullet struck Hopkins in the abdomen, wounding him fatally. Then Masterson turned the gun on himself.

Russell, Police Fail In Roundup

Congressman-Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge will go back to Washington tonight.

And the special meeting of the school committee, which he called from the capital, will not have been held. And despite the best efforts of the police.

But the mayor almost had his meeting this afternoon. Aided by a police car, he came within one member of having a quorum present at City Hall.

Committeeman Russell Wood and John Lacey Delaney were on hand.

Delaney was taking a walk in Cambridge. A police car drew up beside him. Out stepped Mayor Russell, who suggested:

"Step in."

Failing, however, to find another committee member, the meeting was adjourned. Russell and Wood, sitting for the second time in two questioned headmasters about funds they allegedly gathered for School Committeeman Ralph W. Robart in his race for Middlesex sheriff.

LEGION HEAD RAPS SCHOOL REDS

By International News Service

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 19—Communist agents preach their doctrines openly in America, Frank M. Belgrano, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, charged in an address before Pennsylvania Legionnaires today.

Asserting these agents have "invaded our schools and homes," he called upon Legionnaires to give active support to the Americanism program adopted at the Miami convention.

Immediate payment of the adjusted service compensation certificates was urged by the national commander who defied critics of the Legion to prove that "unpreparedness for war ever kept us out of war."

As a safeguard against war, Belgrano recommended a navy second to none, a strong standing army, and adequate air defense.

Senate Picks Wrong Court---Rogers

Reprinted from the New York Times of January 18.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 18—Well, I just this minute come out of Washington.

The Senate opened at twelve o'clock. Huey grabbed 'em by the ears at twelve five and shook 'em till four o'clock. Well, when he turned 'em loose they was ready to go home and behave themselves. They was talking on the World Court.

I don't know what the World Court has got to do with pulling us through the rest of this winter. It's the Supreme Court we are interested in right now, not the World Court.

But, that is just about like the Senate to make that mistake in the names and be arguing over the wrong court.

Philadelphia is booming.

Blind Cow, 38 Millions, Wendel All

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 19—Assets of $8,034,555.68 in the personal property estate of the late Ella V. Von E. Wendel were disclosed today in an accounting.

Among the belongings of the eccentric spinster were an 8-year-old Guernsey cow on the Wendel estate at Irvington, N. Y., 140 chickens, 13 ducks, a 9-year-old black cow "blind in one eye and hip down," wines and liquors from the cellar of the former Wendel mansion on Fifth avenue, jewelry valued at $6346 and a 1918 automobile appraised at $50.

The personal assets were in addition to her $30,956,357 in real estate, which has been turned over to executors of charities.

The temporary administrators' report of expenses included two items for the celebrated Toby, the Wendel poodle. They reported paying a veterinary hospital $17 for medicines and calls at one time, and $19 later for medicines to relieve the dog's eczema. Toby was finally put to death to end his suffering.

SNOW THEN RAIN FOR ICY WEEK-END

The weatherman promises snow late today. Just to hide the ice and make the footing more deceptive. And tomorrow there will probably be more rain and more ice.

However, the temperatures are going up from the low of 6, near which they hovered all night and most of this morning.

The mercury will be in the mid 20s tonight and at least 10 degrees higher tomorrow.

The icy footing sent two women to City Hospital. Miss Katherine M. Comerford, 60, of Cambridge street, Cambridge, who slipped on a sidewalk on Washington street, Roxbury, was under treatment for concussion of the brain.

Miss Mary Mahar, 34, of West Newton street, South End, who slipped on Shawmut avenue, South End, was also feared to have a concussion.

BIRTH CONTROL Aids Face Ouster

New reports that workers and visitors of the welfare department of the City of Boston were advising mothers to see a Brookline doctor for birth control literature brought this statement from John C. Dowling, director of the department today:

"They are doing so against the advice of the department. I have reports but as yet there has been no definite information as to who the visitors are.

"If I receive definite information, the worker will be discharged."

CATINO HELD For Observation

Samuel Catino, who was acquitted of murder in the death of Miss Alice Porter of West Medford, was committed to the Danvers State Hospital today for observation for 35 days.

Commitment was ordered by Judge Elbridge Davis in Malden court after Catino had pleaded not guilty to threatening to assault two youths.

According to the police, Catino appeared near the home of Mrs. Dolly Converse, Allston street, West Medford, and threatened Clarence Connor of Upland, Pa., and Arthur J. Brogan of Grace road, Medford.

By Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 19—Science, the Illinois State Medical Society announced today, may soon provide a means of predetermining sex.

The secret is in vitamin E, lesser known brother of vitamin A, B, C, and D, the society's Journal reported.

The vitamin, plentiful in the oily substance of wheat, appears from "the most ethical laboratory experiments" to have strange powers of telling whether an unborn child will be a boy or a girl, the Journal said.

"Research suggests emphatically that this sex vitamin has an important clinical role in the predetermination of sex," the article asserted.

It is predicted that when experiments have been completed the shaft of wheat, long a barometer of world trade, may be the means of permitting parents to select the sex of their children in advance.

Experiments with rats, the Journal said, showed that females give birth to males and females in direct ration to the sparse or overabundant supply of vitamin E in the diet.

"Apparently hypo-vitaminosis, or a sparse supply, in the case of vitamin E tends to produce male offsprings, just as hypervitaminosis, or an abundant supply, tends to produce females," said the Journal.

It reported an experiment in England in which two women, previously unable to bear children, were treated with the vitamin and each gave birth to a child.

Incidentally, the Journal said, research showed that children treated with the vitamin are more intelligent than other children.

EX-QUEEN HELEN to Wed Italian

London, Jan. 19 (AP)—Former Queen Helen of Rumania, divorced wife of King Carol, is reported to have accepted a proposal of marriage from an Italian prince, according to a special dispatch published in the Sunday Express today.

The prince was identified merely as an ex-cavalry officer, member of the Roman house of Colunna.

The paper published a rumor from Rome that Helen was about to enter the Roman Catholic Church and that the Vatican, which does not recognize divorce, may consider annulment of her marriage to King Carol.

Griselda Higginson Plans Early Spring Wedding

By BETTY ALDEN

THOUGH NO ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of their engagement, the news is gradually reaching their friends that Francis Lee Higginson, Jr., son of Mr. Francis L. Higginson of Commonwealth avenue, and Miss Harriet Scoville of Cornwall, Ct., will soon be wed . . . Higginson has been making his home in New York recently . . . Romance seems to be the order of the day in the Higginson household for Miss Griselda Higginson, whose engagement to Abram S. Hewitt was recently announced, has made plans for an early spring wedding and will announce the date and the all important list of attendants very soon . . .

GRISELDA HIGGINSON

Causing unusual excitement among their families and friends is the announcement that Olive Burroughs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Burroughs of Hillcrest road, Belmont, and John Alden Redfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Latimer Redfield of New York, eloped on December 23 and were married in Portsmouth, N. H. . . .

Winsor School Graduate

THE BRIDE is a widely educated and travelled young lady, having attended Winsor and Harcum Schools and spent a season at the fashionable Chateau Brillantmont in Lausanne, Switzerland . . .

Mr. Redfield's parents are very prominent socially in New York and New Canaan, Ct., where they maintain a country estate . . . He attended St. John's Manlius School in Syracuse, N. Y., and his name is on the roster of several very exclusive clubs, including the Society of Colonial Wars, Mayflower Society and Sons of the Revolution . . . He has business affiliations in Portsmouth, N. H., where he and his bride are making their home for the present . . .

Fashion Show Tea Planned

WHEN THE BRIGHT YOUNG minds which constitute the committee for the Fashion Show Tea to be held on January 29, plan an event their first aim is to raise a large sum for their charity and their second is to give all their friends as much fun as possible . . .

With Mrs. William C. Cox heading the group and a long list of the seasons' debutantes as models in the preview of early spring styles created by Elizabeth Hawes, we predict the fulfillment of both their aims . . .

The Massachusetts Women's Hospital will benefit from the event which will be held at the Hotel Bradford at 3 o'clock.

• • •

Debutantes on Committee

ASSISTING OLIVIA MORGAN on the debutante committee are the following attractive debs . . . Hope Blanchard, Mary Derby, Mary Bryant, Susan Dalton, Martha Endicott, Jessie Fay, Nancy Holdsworth, Barbara McKissock, Elise Russell, Margaret Burnett and Louise Harding . . .

Mannequins have also been culled from the ranks of the young married set . . . representing this group will be Mrs. Lawrence Goodyear, Mrs. Moses Williams, Jr., Mrs. Phillip Rand, Jr., Mrs. Josiah Child, Mrs. Richard Olney . . .

The advance list of patronesses includes Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Allyn McIntire, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Mrs. B. Davis Crowninshield, Mrs. Henry A. Murray, Mrs. Shaw Sprague, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., Mrs. W. Davis Taylor, Miss Helen Moseley, Miss Eleanor Gibson, Mrs. Stephen W. Sleeper and Mrs. Marie Murray . . .

Jane Kelley Plans Flroida Visit

MRS. ROLAND G. HOPKINS will lead a spirited discussion on why "Within the Gates" has been banned in Boston, at luncheon at the Women's City Club on Thursday next . . . Joining in the debate will be Mrs. Winslow Blanchard, Miss Eleanor Allen, Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince and Mrs. William H. Coburn . . .

Before going back to Bennington on February 25, to write her observations on what debutantes get out of society, Jane Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Sears Kelley of Brookline will spend several weeks in Florida . . . there she will have a chance to observe a sister deb, Connie Bader, and get her reactions to society . . .

Mrs. John W. Hallowell, Mrs. Charles F. Mills, Mrs. Dunbar Dexter, Mrs. G. Newell Hurd and Mrs. Lawrence Hemenway are assisting Mrs. Donald Watson with the arrangements for the sub-debutante dance at the Milton Club this evening . . .

TO INCREASE THE ENTHUSIASM of their own friends and stir up interest in the mammoth ball to be held at Boston Garden in honor of the birthday of President Roosevelt the committee has selected a group of attractive young social leaders to work in the different communities of Greater Boston. Mrs. Matthew Brown of Brookline was photographed at the tea given the other afternoon for the women's committee of the ball. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Engaged

Ann Collins in February Ceremony

MR. AND MRS. FRANK DUDLEY COLLINS of Brookline have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ann Patricia Collins, to Hugh F. Blunt of Brockton.

Miss Collins is a graduate of the College of the Sacred Heart, Manhattanville, New York City, and of the Katherine Gibbs Secretarial School, Boston.

Mr. Blunt is a graduate of St. Charles College in Maryand, Notre Dame University in Indiana and of Boston University. He is engaged in the practice of law, being associated with Judge Stewart B. McLeod in Brockton.

The wedding will take place on Feb. 9 in St. Aidan's, Brookline. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Hugh F. Blunt, L. L. D., uncle of the bridegroom-to-be and will be followed by a reception at the home of Miss Collins' parents in Columbia street.

White-Picton

The announcement has been received of the wedding of Mrs. Frances Richardson Picton to Mr. James Norman White.

The ceremony was performed yesterday afternoon in Riverside Chapel in New York, the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of Riverside Church officiating.

Mrs. White, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Howard Richardson of Cincinnati, attended Miss Doherty's school, the Misses Master's school at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and the Garland school here.

True Story

It All Started At Lunch

When Maggie Jones waited on the gent in the blue checked suit, she didn't know that Kid Cupid was leveling his trusty bow at her and this same gent would, in time, be (first) her best beau, and (second) her husband.

The meeting did not start auspiciously.

"Gimme pork chops," said the man.

"Hard or soft rolls?" asked Maggie.

And then she discovered that he wanted punkin pie and a cuppa java. The gent in the blue checked suit read his newspaper while he ate, and he couldn't have, if you had lined up all the waitresses together, told which was the one waiting on him. Maggie did not, let us say, make an impression.

However, the gent in the blue checked suit did make an impression on Maggie.

"See the bird in the blue checked suit. I'm waiting on?" she asked Jeanne, who ran the station next to Maggie's.

"Yeah, what of him?" 'asked Jeanne.

Maggie sighed.

"I could go for a guy like him," she said.

Jeanne sniffed.

"You oughta see my boyfriend," she said. And then added appraisingly: "Clarence is twice as good looking as that fella, and besides he's gotta car."

"Humph, how do you know my fella ain't got a car?" Maggie humphed.

"How do I know?" Jeanne's nose wrinkled in sarcastic furrows. "How do I know? Huh, this fella who you are waiting on ain't got dirty finger-nails, that's why."

"Oh," said Maggie, crushed.

The gent in the blue checked suit groped behind his newspaper for his punkin pie . . . groped in vain and Maggie skipped up and pushed the plate into his reach.

"Thanks," said the awkward one, glancing up for the first time. "Thanks, thanks, thanks."

"You're welcome," said Maggie.

"Nice day," said Jim Grimes.

"Fine," said Maggie. "Grand for driving."

That last was a feeler—did he, or did he not, have a car?

"Cars are a nuisance," said Jim Grimes.

"Yeah," said Maggie, again crushed.

"However, we can't do without 'em nowadays, not in my business, anyway," said Jim.

Maggie perked up.

"What's your business?" she asked.

"I'm an undertaker," said the man in the blue checked suit . . . at least that was what Maggie thought he said.

"Undertaker?" she gasped, and then added agreeably: "Nice to go to funerals in."

"No, a contractor," he replied. "I'm a plumbing contractor."

"Oh," said Maggie.

Now, if it isn't too late, it ought to be mentioned that Maggie Jones was a very pretty girl, even though her mind functioned as though she had been dropped on her head when a small baby. She had it.

CHARMER CHARMED

And it ought to be mentioned that Jim Grimes tossed away his newspaper the moment her charm flashed across his vision.

Any old time a waitress doesn't want to talk, she can scram away to another table and start cleaning dishes, arranging the set-ups, or just wiping things.

Maggie did none of these things, and Jim Grimes saw that she was intrigued, nay interested.

And she showed her interest by her talk, which was about the hostess in part, other waitresses in part, the weather for the past three months in part, and miscellaneous matters of less than vital import in part. All in all, Jim Grimes was spellbound.

He asked, then, when Maggie would be off duty.

"In an hour, but maybe I can get off now. I'll ask the hostess," said Maggie in an affirmative question, if you understand. She knew a date from a fig, and this was a date.

So it happened that thirty two minutes later, Maggie was seated beside Jim Grimes in his car.

"I gotta go over to Brooklyn to look at a job," he said, "and then we'll go places."

"Do you know Clarence McChell?" asked Maggie.

"Do you? He works for me, he's over at the Brooklyn job now," he said.

"Don't know him, but he's my girl friend's boy friend," said Maggie. "I want to look at him, the nerve of her saying he was twice as good looking as you are."

"What's that?" asked Jim Grimes.

And Maggie repeated the conversation she had with Jeanne. Jim laughed at the end of the discourse.

"I lose him my car," he said.

"Oh," said Maggie. "Wait till I tell Jeanne. She's always handing doggone fresh, anyway. That'll take her down a peg or two."

And then, when Maggie saw Clarence, she giggled. So this was that wonderful Clarence! She giggled again, looked at Jim Grimes and made a great resolve.

We told you that she, at time went on, married Jim Grimes. Maggie had a way about her!

Oil Brings Youth to Tissues

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

WE ALL hear plenty these days about muscle stabilizers, and plastic surgeons — even faint whispers about continued youth in gland extracts— but, in our opinion, it's the simpler discoveries that have a place in the wise woman's scheme of things.

Beauty, contrary to all success stories, starts at the top—or very nearly the top. A smooth, white throat, firm and youthful, imparts a loveliness that is impossible to describe.

Snow may fly and cold winds blow, but if you give your throat the same careful trestment that you give your face, you need no fear that it will betray your age. We want to pass on to you one of our pet secrets of the season—a muscle oil that moulds your tissues to give the beauty of a living statue.

The discovery of this muscle oil—so reasonably in price that there need no longer be an excuse for such horrors as crepey threats and crow's feet—is one of the biggest, brightest and best bits of news we've heard in a long time.

Even those sexy gad-abouts, whose life's ambition seems to be to keep their dates from getting mixed, or mowing down the stag line, will realize the common sense of an oil that will retain the serene, dewey softness of youth. Not only will this oil keep your chin and neck young and lovely, but it will lubricate your skin in as entirely new way.

Used with a companion tissue cream that I also discovered, it will do the task most thoroughly. You can use them alone, or singly—it all depends on how much your skin needs it. The fact is that they will battle the icy winds for you and bring the moistness of youth to parched January skins.

A single drop of this muscle oil, smoothed into the palm of your hand and then mixed with the tissue cream, will be greedily absorbed by your hungry skin. The cream resulting from this mixture gives a heavenly, soothing feeling, and is so effective that you need not go to bed all greased up. In fact, ten minutes of this mixture on your face and the good work is done.

When used alone the oil is simply grand for smoothing out forehead lines, correcting crows' feet and moulding the neck. The tissue cream is as effective as any we have seen, rich but not greasy, and they are both extremely reasonably priced. In fact, the muscle oil costs about two-thirds less than similar oils on the market.

To learn the name of this muscle oil and companion tissue cream, call the Beauty Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Looking Both Ways Discussed by

Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

When we approach a railroad crossing, it is just as well to look both ways.

Such a habit may stand us in good stead as we approach mental crossings of the tracks in our decisions. It is well to look both back and ahead.

We must consider what has been thought the moral and best procedure in the mind of the past, while at the same time we do well to try to discern and keep abreast of what the best conscience of tomorrow will detect.

We may wea: bifocal glasses, and look two ways at once, because we are living in a sort of "in-between" stage of history.

Almost invariably heretofore, in making their moral decisions, people looked backward to determine what was the tradition, what did the Bible say, what did the church teach, what was the acknowledged moral law in the matter.

While in the new world round about us created by the development of the critical faculty in college education, and the emphasis on independent thinking, this inventive age is given to blazing new trails and marching courageously ahead, choosing patterns of conduct with sublime disregard for what has been handed down from the past.

In a day's journey through our contemporary world we encounter the children of yesterday, slavishly, dutifully following old laws, old forms, old proof texts, and suspicious of the new freedom.

And in greater numbers we meet the children of today who refuse to bother themselves about loyalties of the past, and believe that mankind is just beginning to learn how to behave.

Neither alternative seems adequate by itself.

Those who are solely obedient to the moral tradition of the past are not necessarily more religious. For to trust somewhat to one's highest intuitions is to believe in the inner light of Divine leading, and to be aware of the reality of God's marching along through time with humanity.

It is a religion, not of law, but of the spirit.

Yet to blandly and blindly ignore the priceless truths so patiently mined by humanity and, in one instance, so uniquely disclosed by the genius of Jesus' insight, in the vain imagining that truth and common sense are borne into the world for the first time in ourselves is stupid folly.

And unless our liberty of opinion and decision is tutored and disciplined by frequent recourse to the old source truths, we go sadly astray.

If the election is between the old and the new, I wait to vote the fusion ticket. We best discover new applications of truth by searching to the depths the truths already known.

Wise experiments evolve out of experience. None can afford to disregard the truth patiently gathered from the past. And none can afford to stop there.

We must believe that our horizons can be pushed further out, and we must dare to blaze new trails.

Ideally designed to the needs of this age is the figure of Jesus, so marvellously patient, dutiful, loyal to the religious tradition in which He was born, yet in the time of crisis so ready to stand as a progressive pioneer, even though He be condemned as a radical.

Because He inaugurated a new world, He first must learn to live between two worlds. And so today, as again a new era dawns and men are perplexed between the old and the new, the enlightening spirit of Jesus can show us how to be wise Scribes, who take out of their treasure things both new and old.

LOVE DENIED

By Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

KentWants Sharlene To Elope

CHAPTER VIII

Stuart was still hard at his painting later in the day when Lucien Morrow came up, bringing Abe Foreman with him. The latter was a picture dealer—a hard-headed, opinionated, little man, who knew his market.

He could sell striking colorful things to the movie talent who then had ready cash to burn. That is, if the pictures had an unusual theme, a mood. These movie people were restless modernists. They loved terrific contrasts, drama, a sweep of movement and broad splurges of color.

This fellow Pennington's pictures, now, always had drama. You didn't sense his meaning at first glance, it grew on you gradually . . . Finally, you'd buy it.

"You've still got that 'Death,' Mr. Pennington, which was in the Stendahl exhibit?"

Stuart produced the small canvas and set it in a good light. Abe Foreman squinted at it silently for some minutes.

'I Can Sell That'

"H'm. I think I have a buyer. He liked it at the gallery . . . says he can't get it out of his mind since. I'll try to get five hundred dollars for it. Small canvas—no name. All right with you?"

Stuart nodded and began to wrap the picture in a piece of paper.

"A little publicity about this one—and the next one will bring more. I'm going to build you up."

The art dealer looked about the studio. He came to the just finished "Sun Through Clouds" and was lost in contemplation. Lucien Morrow watched him with a faint, proprietary smile.

"This the one you told me about, Lucien?"

"Yes. Pip, isn't it?"

"I can sell that. How about it, Mr. Pennington?" declared the dealer.

"It goes to the Biltmore for two weeks. After that, you may."

Julie was in the background, gloating. Lucien went over to her and pinched her cheek, exchanging delighted glances with her.

"Would you—and Mr. Foreman—have some beer?" she asked eagerly.

Mr. Foreman answered for himself. "Would I have some beer! Would a dog accept a chicken bone! Come on, let me help you open it."

He bustled off to the kitchen arm in arm with Julie.

Lucien clapped the silent Stuart warmly on the back.

"You're over, boy!"

"Thanks, old man. You've done this—"

"Not me! You're just getting your break; and you sure deserve it." Then he dropped his arm, hesitating, growing sober and anxiously scanning Stuart's haggard face. "I—I saw in the paper this morning—"

"Yes?" quietly. "What was in it?"

"Oh . . . Did I step off? I supposed you'd seen it—"

"Sharlene? Was her engagement announced?"

Morrow nodded, not meeting Stuart's eyes.

"She told me yesterday," Stuart said coolly. "And I met Kent Damerell. Swell chap!"

"She's Foolish"

"Well," said Lucien explosively, "she's foolish. I always thought she'd fall in love with you—"

"Nonsense! We've known each other five years—the best of friends—but she's never been in love with me. No: the slightest."

And at this moment, Sharlene was saying to Kent: "Don't be silly, dear. Stuart's just my very best friend. You know you have my heart!"

"I'll never be sure I've won," he said, "until I get the official award." They were walking up to the little Japanese teahouse which crowned the highest point on her estate. The path wound beside pools where goldfish flashed among the lily pads, past miniature mountains with dwarfed trees and tiny caves with the figures of Shinto priests in front of them, past the great Buddha smiling flatly from his niche, and over the arched stone bridge.

In the cool, bare little house, Sharlene prepared tea, with her own hands while Kent stretched out on a mat, arms under his head in sleepy content. There was everything there to make tea, carefully locked away in a carved cabinet. Fragrant orange pekoe, tins of biscuits, an electric plate and tea-kettle.

"I love doing this, Kent," she smiled down on him as she drew water from the tap.

"It's great. No servants around."

"Yes, and more than that, I love doing something for you—with my hands. Do you know what I mean? I wish we were poor, so that I could do everything for you—"

"Silly!" He laughed at her. "You wouldn't like it for long."

"But I love you so! I want to give and give—and do and do!"

She stopped her preparations to kneel beside him and put her hands about his face. She looked with a kind of fierce intensity down into his dark, laughing eyes.

"There's never been anything like this for me before, Kent. I've accepted love—so unthinkingly. But I've never known the splendor of giving, before. It's—it's gorgeous to give, darling—to give!"

They forgot all about the teakettle bubbling away on the electric plate.

"Marry me tomorrow, Sharlene!" he begged.

She shook her head, smiling down at him.

"No mother's set the date for the 15th, all according to the stars. Mustn't upset the stars in their orbits, you know!"

"Let's run away—and be married quietly—just us two and a justice of the peace—"

"Oh, Kent! I want the clergyman—and the veil—and the orange blossoms! It'll be the only time for me—and neither of us has been married. It isn't as if we had been, and had been divorced several times like many of our friends.

"Funny little kid! You're so many-sided! You're the freest thing I know, and yet—you're bound by ancient formulae."

"Do you mind?"

"Darling—you shall have your sacraments! Of course, I shall discipline myself to the long wait."

"Long? Fifteen days! . . . But it is long—Kent, I love you so! I'm frightening myself already with fears of dreadful things happening to you—"

"Nothing's going to happen, Sharlene.

GREY—The important neutral shade of the year—in a quilted crepe that gives a lovely light and shadow effect, is used in a simple and wholly charming budget frock (around sixteen dollars). Carved amber colored buttons give unusual contrast carried on with brown in the off-the-face hat, and gloves. Read about the smart setting for the frock, in the right hand caption.

A blend of important influences in the modern manner, combined with authentic reproductions of 18th century pieces, makes this the sort of room today's homemaker plans. All excellent pieces, using solid woods, yet moderately priced. Important points—Victorian treatment of modern gold fabric at window, with painted wooden cornice; left to right. An original oil of a Gloucester scene, a drum Sheraton table, a cedar green velvet 18th century chair, a Modern-Victorian white wire plant stand, a modern Chippendale chair in eggshell crackle finish. The color scheme is in green and eggshell.

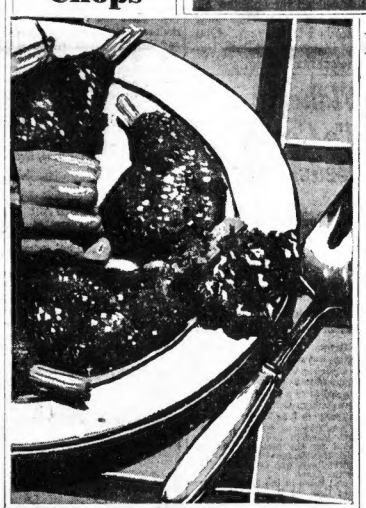
PEANUT BUTTER Chops



MOCK CHOPS—AND THEY'RE DELICIOUS

Down South, where chops are chops, cooks broil them, or even fry them, an exquisite brown and serve them with such good companions as spoon bread and applesauce. And Southerners live happily ever after.

There are some delicious ways to serve chops which aren't chops at all, but which are a combination of breadcrumbs and peanut butter masking as chops, and served as a meat course substitute.

Peanut Butter Chops: ½ cup soft breadcrumbs; ¼ cup grated American cheese; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley; ½ teaspoon prepared mustard; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-6 teaspoon pepper; 2-3 cup peanut butter; 1 beaten egg; milk or water to moisten; 2-inch sticks of macaroni; butter. Combine crumbs cheese, parsley, seasonings and peanut butter and moisten with beaten egg and milk or water (6 to 4 tablespoons) to make a mixture which can be handled easily. Divide into six portions, shape into chops on a board sprinkled with a few additional breadcrumbs, insert a macaroni "bone" in the narrow end of each chop and saute in a little hot butter, turning to brown both sides. Garnish with parsley and with heated asparagus tips, bound together with a strip of pimienta. Serve tomato sauce separately. Makes 6 chops.

Try Peanut Butter Chops today, and be prepared for applause! Our Home Institute has just issued a thirty-two page booklet of appetizing menus and new recipes. Including a chapter on foods that men like. To get it fill in the coupon and mail it today!

Refusing Force in Dummy

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In Duplicate games some hands are won by one side before the play has even started.

Over half the time, however, after the bidding is over, the work has just begun. For instance, on the hand below North and South reached a magnificent game contract — one which was reached at only two tables in the entire room. However, declarer had to make a decision at Trick 2 and he had to make this decision correctly to fulfill his contract. The hand is recounted below.

South, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♢	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♣	Pass	4♣ (1)	Pass
4♠ (2)	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) South's bidding of the two red suits followed by the subsequent club support shows to North that the South hand contains at the most a doubleton spade and in all probability only a singleton.

North therefore gives up any ideas of playing the hand in notrump and tries for the game in clubs.

(2) This bid is slightly optimistic but a definitely justifiable gamble.

East opened the spade Ace and upon receiving a high-card signal from his partner continued with the suit in an effort to start to shorten the dummy and thus make the club King a winner.

North, before playing from the dummy at Trick 2, had to decide upon his entire plan of campaign. Two definite indications led North to realize that the club King was correctly located.

One, of course, was East's double, as the other was East's spade continuation, obviously done to try to turn the club King into a winner.

North did not know how many times the club King was guarded. He did know, however, that he had to avoid the loss of either the club King or the diamond King to fulfill his contract.

Since he was certain that the club King was in the East hand, North decided to play the hand on that basis and in a way which would bring about the fulfillment of the contract even though East also held the diamond King, provided only that the hearts were not badly divided and that the East hand was the long one if they did break 4-2.

In line with this reasoning, North therefore refused to force on dummy at Trick 2 and deliberately gave up a second spade trick. A diamond was discarded from dummy, and West won. The East-West defense from this point on was immaterial.

West actually returned a diamond, which North won with his Ace. He now led a club to dummy and finessed the seven-spot. Three rounds of hearts were played, and the third one ruffed in North's own hand. The dummy was again re-entered by a finesse to the club Queen and a fourth heart was trumped.

A club was led to dummy's Ace, dropping East's King, and North's losing diamond was discarded on the long heart in dummy.

The spade Queen of course was good in declarer's hand and the contract was fulfilled.

North could also have made his contract by a squeeze if at Trick 4 he had led the club Jack and let it hold, and then cleared the club suit.

Fight ANEMIA With FOOD

By MARTHA LEE

WE HEAR and read a great deal these days about anemia. The award of the Nobel prize in medicine to Doctors Minot, Murphy and Whipple for their work on anemia has brought forth reviews of the subject and reports of progress made.

IRON-RICH FOOD

Make sure first of all, that the diet abounds in iron-rich foods. If anemia is severe or persistent even when plenty of iron is supplied in food, a physician should be consulted. It may be that a concentrate which supplies the gastric substance as well as iron in large amounts is needed.

Good sources of iron are the whole grain cereals, particularly bran; liver, beef, oysters, green vegetables, such as escarole, kale, spinach; egg yolks, molasses, white potatoes, carrots, beets, green peas, string beans, cabbage; dried fruits, such as prunes, dates and raisins, strawberries, bananas, pineapple.

CORRECT MENUS

Suggestions for iron-rich menus are given below. The general rule is to include plenty of the whole grain cereals, green leafy vegetables, root vegetables, fruits, every day and one of the iron-rich proteins, such as eggs, liver, beef or oysters once a day or several times a week.

DOCTOR SAYS TWO BULLETS STRUCK DICKY

CHAPTER 246

With a poignant pang of sympathy, I recognized a note of something closely resembling terror in Dicky's voice, as he put his query to the physician.

But there was more than recognition in that sympathetic thrill.

There was comprehension of his reason for the questions, and I involuntarily leaned forward in breathless anxiety to hear the answer. Did the physician hesitate? I was not sure, so short an interval elapsed between Dicky's question and his answer.

"I do not think so," he said. But it came very dear it—so dear that it may have grazed it."

The color ebbed from Dicky's face again.

"D—n it, man, you'd better be sure," he said. "That's my drawing arm you know."

"By jove, that's so," he said. "I had forgotten about your being a draftsman, the artist."

In his voice there was the peculiar intonation, composed of one part deferential respect and the two parts ironic, amused wonder, with which people outside the professions usually speak of those who earn their bread and jam as authors or artists.

"Yes, I happen to be that unfortunate person," Dickey said irritably. "But that isn't the question. What I want to know is what you mean by 'just grazing'? Will the ligament be hurt in the least?"

"I do not think you need have any fear on that score," the doctor said, after a second. "But just to satisfy yourself, why don't you let me take you over to the hospital for a day or two? I can make only a cursory examination here. There, you can know very quickly just what damage has been done, if any. I am confident you will find these are only flesh wounds."

"These?" Hugh Grantland echoed. "Was there more than one wound?"

"Yes, too," the physician replied laconically.

"And a low average it was, too," Dicky commented. "The beggar fired six times at me."

I shivered, and my eyes went with instinctive, involuntary appeal to those of Hugh Grantland. If my fantastic theory concerning Lbe Chow were true, could Hugh guarantee the shackling of the murderous hand which had fired these shots?

Hugh evidently had been watching me, for my searching eyes found his instantly, and into them came an intent look which spelled a distinct message to me. Then he gave me a little nod, almost imperceptible, but which brought infinite comfort and reassurance to me.

"If you wish to go to the hospital," he turned to Dickey, "I wish you would go in my car. There is room enough in it for both the chief and me beside you."

"Why, thank you, old chap," Dickey said, and I was afraid I detected in his voice a note of constraint, indicating the reluctance with which he usually receives any proffer of aid from Hugh. "But that seems unnecessary, if the doctor has his car here, ready to give me a lift."

"Do you think we are going to let you go alone, my boy?" my father demanded affectionately, and Dicky gave him the smile with which he always greets "the chief."

"I surely don't want to drag you away from home at this hour, sir," he said.

"Just let me be the judge of that," my father returned. And then he turned to the young physician, with the authoritative air he knows so well how to assume.

"Is your car a large one?" he asked.

"No, only a runabout."

"Then I am sure you will agree with me," my father went on suavely, "that it would be far better for my son-in-law to go with Major Grantland and myself in the same car than in a runabout with you, where there would be little room for him. Of course, you will take Mrs. Bickett with us, if she will go"—he made a courtly bow in Katherine's direction—"and she will remain at the hospital until Mr. Graham returns home."

Katherine spoke one word to me in an undertone.

"Faith?" she said.

"All right," I returned emphatically, in equally low tones, and Katherine turned her eyes to my father's face.

"I shall be glad to go," she said simply. "It will get my patient ready for moving right away."

But my husband put out a protesting hand.

BRAVES TO STAY AT TEPEE

Fuchs Is Still President

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1935

SPEEDS HOME WITH ADAMS

MUST LOCATE 'ANGEL' BEFORE FEBRUARY 5

By Universal Service

New York, Jan. 19—After 13 hours of heavy deliberation, executives of the National League were speeding home today satisfied that they had completely ironed out one of the most perplexing dilemmas ever to confront baseball—the problem of whether or not the Boston Braves would remain in the circuit or step aside to let dog racing and pari-mutuel betting supplant major league ball at Braves Field.

While the moguls from all eight clubs in the loop remained silent except for a few unimportant announcements, newspapermen, who kept the long vigil while the club heads were in solemn conclave hoping for something "big," came out of it all with nothing better than three reasonable inferences.

1—Judge Fuchs will still be president of the Braves in the coming season.

2—The Braves will play their home games at Braves Field.

3—There will be no dog racing at Braves Field in 1935.

Yet the problem is not entirely solved. Fuchs and Vice-President Charles F. Adams were rushing home today to complete arrangements with "certain parties" who were not at the meeting but who still have something to say about the Braves and Braves Field financially.

FEB. 5

Ford Frick, freshman president of the National League, said he expected the entire situation would be cleared satisfactorily to baseball and to the Boston fans at the schedule meeting of the loop on February 5 and that there would be no material change in the management of the Braves with Fuchs staying as business boss and Bill McKechnie as team pilot.

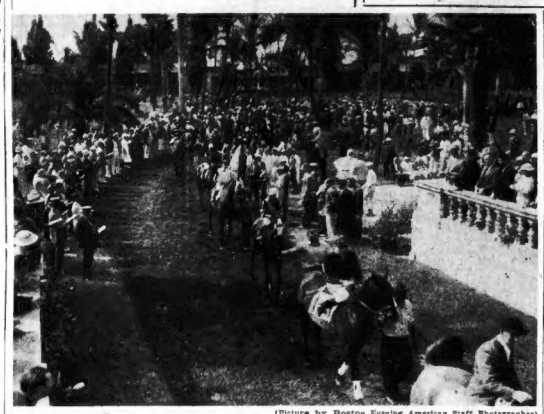
Babe Ruth, evidently, was not mentioned. Rumors were that the Braves would be sold to someone who would be able to foot all bills and that this someone would make McKechnie president of the club and install Ruth as manager.

Fuchs stepped out of the gruelling meeting, which opened at 10 a. m., and didn't adjourn until almost 11 p. m., with a large grin; everything must have been all right.

"We're staying right in Braves Field," confessed the Judge. "This talk of the Braves being baseball orphans is silly.

They're Coming Out

A Scene at Hialeah



(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

Here is a picturesque scene at beautiful Hialeah as a large crowd watched the first parade to the post of the season at the park which opened its meeting on Thursday. Palm trees and summery clothes shown in this picture are a marked contrast to the snow and cold which the weather man has dished up for Boston.

DUSEK LASHED BY IRISH WHIP

16,000 WATCH CONTEST

DANNO SHOWS TREMENDOUS STRENGTH

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight champion, beat Rudy Dusek into submission before a roaring crowd of 16,000 persons at the Garden.

The mighty Celt gained the first fall in 15 min. 21 sec. with a body roll and top body press, and the second toss in the sensational time of 7 min. 7 sec. with his famous Irish Whip.

Dusek was knocked cold by the Irish Whip. He suffered an ugly wound on the inside of his lip when O'Mahoney sent him crashing to the mat for the second fall.

Blood flowed freely from the wound, and Dusek's face was an ungainly sight as he was pinned for the final fall.

The force of the crash stunned the Omaha warrior, and he had to be carried to his corner. It was fully five minutes before Dusek's seconds attempted to carry him to his dressing room.

The Irish champion looked even more impressive than he did in his American debut. He has adopted many American wrestling holds.

OUT OF RING

O'Mahoney showed a fair body scissors hold while he also employed a turn over body scissors. He was particularly effective with a reverse headlock. He repeatedly dropped Dusek with this hold.

In the early stages of the contest Dusek engaged in several tests of strength with O'Mahoney. The latter twice threw Dusek from the ring.

In the mixups at close quarters, Dan was too powerful for Rudy. He beat the latter back with heavy punches to the jaw.

O'Mahoney surprised Dusek when he didn't use his Irish Whip in the early stages of the tussle. He finally dropped Rudy with a leg lock, and then applied a body scissors.

While Rudy was trying to break this hold, O'Mahoney suddenly went into a body roll, landing on top of his opponent and pinned him with a body press in 13m. 21s.

OVER HE GOES

Back on the mat after the rest period, O'Mahoney kept forcing the issue. He didn't give Rudy a second's rest. He dropped Dusek to the canvas with short punches, and danced him with headlocks.

O'Mahoney electrified the huge crowd when he applied his first Irish Whip of the bout.

Twice he dropped Rudy only to have the latter wriggle under the ropes. Referee Sam Smith ordered Dan to release his hold.

The Irish champion crowded Dusek to the ropes and seized him with his powerful right hand.

The Irish Whip was applied with sudden force. Dusek was tossed to the mat, then lifted in the air and hurled over O'Mahoney's shoulder.

Rudy crashed to the canvas, suffered the injuries described above, and was pinned in 7m. 7s.

O'Mahoney was cheered like a conquering hero as he fought his way through the ringside crowd to his dressing room.

PRELIMS

Dick Shikat easily won from Al Sparks in 11m. 55s. with a reverse wrist lock and back fall.

Nick Lutz returned to Boston after a triumphant tour in California and went to a 20m. draw with Bob Russell. Lutze showed a lot of his dazzling speed and was able to offset Russell's roughness by his own remarkable skill.

George Zaharas of Chicago pinned the "Mysterious Ghost" with an inside crotch hold and body roll in 9m. 36s.

Zaharas failed to unmask the "Mysterious Ghost," and a fan tried to as the vanquished wrestler was leaving the arena.

The "Mysterious Ghost," however, escaped, and his identity remains a secret.

John Spellman won over Jim Garms of Texas in 8m. 24s. with a flying mare and top body press.

Rudy Laditsi and Rube Wright engaged in a fiery 15m. draw. The big fellows did as much battling outside the ropes as they did inside.

Ernie Dusek and Leo Numa thrilled the fans by their fast work in their 15m. draw.

IRISH WHIP

The start of the "Irish Whip," now famous hold which has made Dan O'Mahoney the darling of the wrestling crowds and a real threat for the world heavyweight championship held by Ed Don George.

(Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

The finish, or very close to it. O'Mahoney's opponent is whirled through the air with the "Irish Whip" and crashed to the mat. One of these stopped Rudy Dusek at the Garden.

AUSTEN LAKE on Danno Enjoys Second Adventure

RUDY DUSEK, WHO STUDIED GRUNTS, whinnies and cackles in his Omaha barnyard and converted them into cash as a wrestler, was ironed out like a damp bedsheet at the hands of a tall, pink-cheeked Irish boy in the evening's merrymaking at the Garden.

Austen Lake

At the end Rudy sprawled out like an unshelled clam, a smear of raspberry jam trickling down his chin, and was swept up as so much smashed pantryware to be carted off on the shoulders of his little brother, Ernie, limp as a bar rag.

This was in accordance with pre-match logic and a step in the advancement of Dan O'Mahoney toward his goal, which is to be wrestled with by one of the various heavyweight world champions.

It was an instructive evening for the large gathering, in which Rudy spanked the Irish Adonis with the flat of his bunch-of-banana hands and unfurled his upper lip like a window sash, showing a display of fearful fangs, some of which were inlaid with battleship brass, and bringing up liquid, gurgling bellows that bubbled from the wells of his innermost wrath.

* * *

Hoe-handling Rudy

ABOUT 15 MINUTES after casting off, O'Mahoney began to single-skull Rudy a full Henley-distance around the ring, twizzling on his arm in an absent-minded sort of way like a ferryman hauling on an oar handle.

Rudy was squinting his eyes and roaring with agony, while the ringside patrons asked: please, to be thrown his limb as a keepsake of the evening.

There was a bit of a tangle, like two lizards intertwined, and presently Dusek pancaked near the ropes for what the ghostly voice of the loudspeaker said, was a fall induced by a "body roll and a top body press."

This naturally pleased the partisan patrons, who let go a wild rebel yell as the two athletes retired to sponge off and refresh themselves with tap-water gargles.

* * *

Good Pitching By Danno

AS THE FESTIVAL RESUMED, O'Mahoney led by fumbling in the weedy growth of witch grass on Rudy's bosom, being ordered out of the rough by Referee Sam Smith, who gave him a free lift without penalizing stroke and distance.

At this point Danno took his full wind up and kept pitching Rudy through the ropes until he had delivered the equivalent of a base on balls. It was clear that Danno's control was wild, although he showed a nice change of pace, and a slow inshoot.

Just when authors in the press row had snatched up their typewriters and were yelling for a new pitcher, Dusek stopped skull-crushing, gave off a tug-boat yelp in a deep Bohemian accent, and the two went to threshing on the floor like a pair of primeval alligators contending for the affection of some sweet lady alligator in the prehistoric muck and twilight of the world.

Then, after a little whooshing and gurgling, O'Mahoney sledged Rudy with his elbow and busted a blood capsule in his mouth, causing a crimson drool that looked as though a ripe tomato had been splashed on his chin, and bringing squeals of horror from the female customers.

This seemed like a good time to swoon, and Rudy slumped down in a loose floor pose, like a cafeterian oyster, where he was left to the janitor.

* * *

Mr. Grimes' Mistake

FOR SMOKE AND ASHES the first bout of the evening won the Ladies' Aid layer cake. A gentleman whose purple dressing gown wore the legend "Rowdy Rudy" and a lardy man named Rube Wright peeled off strips of skin until they looked as though weevils had been at them.

Rowdy had an annoying custom of smacking Wright on the snout about twelve inches from the end of his nose, while at one time Wright began unscrewing Rowdy's knee, twisting it like a street musician churning on a hand organ, until Mr. Bill Grimes, the Boston American's golf expert, leaned over the ring apron and announced, "Please Mr. Wright, but you are grinding your own knee."

This caused some consternation, and both men made fresh grabs, in which it was discovered that they had been unscrewing the correct knees in the first place.

Well, Wright was in a pet, and he took careful sight between the golf expert's ears and scaled Rudy in his direction.

But Grimes ducked under the platform, and Rowdy became snarled in the plush ring ropes, dangling there like a Christmas tree decoration, in grave danger of choking to death, until the refree unstrung him.

* * *

German Lullaby

DICK SHIKAT, A BENEVOLENT old German who enjoys the dignity of being an alumnus of the large crowd who once held the championship of the world, then came on and dusted the ring furniture with a bulky wrestler named Al Sparks, after the manner of a careless maid wielding a house cloth.

Whipped

Rudy Dusek, victim of Dan O'Mahoney's famed "Irish Whip."

Shikat, who bore a red mat burn on the tip of his nose, seemed to enjoy this, wearing the whimsical smile of a family man playing at nursery games.

Finally, after applying an assortment of Scandinavian specialties, including half Nelsons, two-thirds Olsons and seven-eighths Swensons, Sparks curled up on the mat and went to sleep, lulled by the rocking motion.

So beyond the hint of revived trade in the customer volume, the evening's entertainment reached no new high and consisted of the same familiar hunks of meat being slung onto the clattering boards.

The patrons who peeled off from 50 cents to $2.20 witnessed their money's worth of pain, and only Rudy Dusek appeared to be injured 50 cents' worth.

$150,000 Guaranteed BAER

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 19—Herman "Muggsy" Taylor, Philadelphia boxing promoter, speaking:

"I am prepared to give Max Baer a guarantee of $150,000 with the privilege of 50 per cent of the gate receipts to fight two men 10 rounds apiece the same night, preferably Steve Hamas and Art Lasky.

"I will give Baer's opponents $35,000 each, the show to take place in Philadelphia late next spring. I will put up the money in escrow immediately the men agree to the bout.

"I am going to Miami to see the boxing show at which Baer is to appear on January 24 and make my proposition to Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman."

Big Green Loses

New York, Jan. 19—Columbia won its third straight Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League game, defeating Dartmouth, 37 to 22, before a crowd of 1200 fans. The victory placed the Lions in a temporary tie with Penn for the league lead.

Frank Jerwa Tickled To Get Away From Boston

SHANNON UP WITH BRUINS BEFORE LONG, SAYS GRIMES

By Bill Grimes

Some weeks ago, Frank Jerwa was ordered to report to the Bruins' office and was accused of loafing . . .

"Well, Frank, you're going to New York," was the greeting the Cub scoring ace received.

"Great, it's about time I got a break."

"Oh, yes, well you're going to play with the Bruins."

"Oh, hell," was Frank's reply.

That remark settled Frank's future . . . He was just as good as back with the Cubs as soon as he pulled it . . . He marked time with the Bruins for a fortnight or so and then was ordered back to the Cubs . . . Just as soon as he stopped seeing "red," he began to score again and within no time he was leading the Can-Am League.

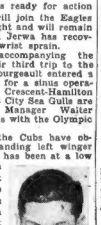
Frank Jerwa

George Boucher, manager of the St. Louis Eagles, is anxious to strengthen his club, and one of the first questions he asked when he arrived in town last Tuesday was, "How are the Jerwas going?" . . . And so the Bruins and St. Louis consummated a deal whereby Frank Jerwa was traded for Jerry Shannon.

Unfortunately, Frank was injured during the New Haven game at the Arena . . . Upon being advised of it Boucher demanded a center iceman . . . So Gene Carrigan was sent to the Eagles to pinch hit until Frank was ready for action . . . Carrigan will join the Eagles in Toronto tonight and will remain with them until Jerwa has recovered from the wrist sprain.

Instead of accompanying the Beavers on their third trip to the "States," Leo Bourgeault entered a Quebec hospital for a sinus operation . . . The Crescent-Hamilton and the Atlantic City Sea Gulls are tangling with Manager Walter Brown for games with the Olympic club.

In Shannon, the Cubs have obtained an outstanding left winger . . . His morale has been at a low ebb, due to an asinine remark passed by Eddie Gerard, but you can put it on the line, that Jerry will be up with the Bruins before the end of the season . . . He has far too much ability to remain in any minor league.



Herb Gallagher

The Olympic club returned from New Haven after the Yale game in record time . . . The first squad arrived at 4 a. m. But Herbie Gallagher, Freddie McDonnell and Trainer Stako came to grief in Ray Lapham's car while trekking through Durham, Conn. . . . and made the remainder of the journey in the choo-choos . . .

Flaherty To Coach Redskins

By Walter Kiley

Potent rumor has it that Ray Flaherty, field captain and assistant coach of the New York Giants, professional football champions of 1934, will coach the Boston Redskins next fall.

George Marshall, Redskins' proxy, and sole authority in naming a successor to Lone Star Dietz, is supposed to be basking in the Florida sun after a solo tour in search of a gridiron Goliath.

Therefore it is impossible to get a confirmation. But it is known that Marshall had three men in mind for the position, Flaherty, Dick Harlow, now of Harvard and "Biff" Jones, who decided to stand by the Army.

And those in the know feel certain that the Redskins' boss has definitely settled on Flaherty.

Flaherty, himself, is now en route for the West Coast where the Giants are to play a series of games, one of them with Chicago Bears.

A resident of Spokane, Wash., he played end for Gonzaga University. He is 30 years old, six feet tall, weighs 190 pounds. He went to the Giants in 1929 after playing non-league professional football for several seasons.

In 1930 he returned to Gonzaga as head coach, the same season he appeared in Boston in a Braves' baseball uniform. He was given a trial here as a catcher and later was shipped to Providence.

He returned to the Giants in 1931 and has been there ever since, in 1932 and 1933 winning All-America professional football honors.

He is said to be one of the smartest minds of the football game, a clever strategist and an outstanding scout.

Chelsea Wins

Co-captain Sol Nechtem was a hero in Chelsea today, following his last minute goal which gave the Chelsea high five and upset 22-21 victory over highly rated Brockton before a gathering of 2000 in Chelsea Armory.

The Red Devils not only were outweighed by the visitors but played without Coach Bill Kenally, who is ill with pleurisy.

Nechtem's game-saving basket came with but 45 seconds to play.

Big Sports Day, Boss

Fuchs and Adams Back; Sarazen Wants Ouimet

Here's day's doings, boss:

Gene Sarazen wants Francis Ouimet to be his partner in national amateur-pro four-ball championships at St. Augustine, Fla., next month. See you Monday.

BOB AHEARN.

TIME TRIALS Held at Tech

This afternoon at 2:30 Coach Oscar Hedlund was to stage the first of his time trials for Beaver runners, striving to make the one and two-mile relay teams for the K. of C games at the Garden next Saturday night.

Captain Morton Jenkins is the only sure post winner.

Al Faatz, Jr., Henry Runkel, Nestor Sabi are other headliners.

Yale Matmen

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 19—Overtime competition carried Yale and Brown almost to the midnight hour before the Elis gained an 18½ to 11½ decision, in opening the Eli mat season here.

Setters Win Race

Lancaster, N. H., Jan. 19 (INS)—Driving five cross Irish setters which he raised, Ross F. Stanard of Lancaster today held a victory in the Lancaster dog race over 15 starters, coming home in 54 minutes, 25 seconds for the 13-mile route. The Mellhenny team of Philadelphia came in second. The 15 teams compete tomorrow in the Wonalancet-Chocorua race.

Hack Signs

Chicago, Jan. 19 (INS)—Infielder Stanley Hack today was signed to a Chicago Cub contract for 1935. The fifth of the Cubs personnel to join in, Tuck was the first of the squad to respond by mail. He is sojourning at Sacramento, Cal.

Mr. Boston Shucco Off for Florida

By Jack Conway

TONY SHUCCO, North End light heavyweight, accompanied by Dan Carroll and Mrs. Carroll, left for Miami, Fla. today. Shucco will box Joe Knight of Georgia in a ten-round bout at Miami on next Thursday night.

Barney Ross will defend his title as world's junior welterweight champion against Frankie Klick on the same card.

Mr. Boston

Max Baer will add to the merriment when he opposes Jim Maloney in a four-round tussle on the same card. Buddy Baer will also toss punches at the Miami show.

I don't believe Buddy will ever develop into a great heavyweight. He is slow and lacks driving power in getting across his right hand smash. The one thing in Buddy's favor is his size.

There are so few good heavyweights around that any youngster weighing over 200 pounds, with courage and a fair punch, has a chance to make considerable money.

Max Baer towers over all opposition. In condition, he can knock out any man in the world inside of 15 rounds. He should rule the heavyweight division for three to five more years.

* * *

Sam Cohen, able sports writer on the staff of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, was aboard the same train with Shucco, Miami bound.

He will send back to Boston some excellent feature sports stories, which will be published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. He will also write a breezy column, "Boston at Miami," for the Boston Evening American.

It will be filled with items about people you know.

HOUSE OF DAVID

I AM going to put my whiskers on and hop out to the Boston Y. M. H. A. gym in Roxbury tonight to see the House of David five in action against Coach Johnny Fox's B. S. U. basketball champions. Coach Fox will be master of ceremonies, and promises a fine evening of sports. The local five will have Eddie Winsapple, Hookie Hyte, Sammy Shapiro, Bill Fienberg, Jesse Weiner and Izzy Sherman in its lineup.

St. Thomas A. A. will oppose the Boston Y. M. H. A. Juvenile in the opening feature for first place honors in the Greater Boston League.

* * *

Sam Smith is trying to pick a spot for the game between the Boston W. M. H. A. and West End House five. There is so much interest in this clash that one of the larger halls of the city is sought for the contest.

* * *

Dick Kunan and Leo Volk of the American Canoe Association, national tilting champions, will compete at the indoor tilting championships and canoe meet at Mechanics Building from February 2 to February 9.

Samoset and Crescent Canoe Clubs have also sent along entries. The events will be the cedar shell tandem tug-o'-war, tilting, canoe tilting contest and hand paddle. Each event is open to any person living in New England.

The ladies, God bless them, will have an opportunity to compete in special events on Sunday afternoon, February 3.

RANDOM SHOTS

DAN O'MAHONEY has signed to battle Ernie Dusek in a return bout in Philadelphia next Friday night under the direction of Ray Fabiani . . . The Irish champion leaves for Philadelphia tomorrow night . . . He will be met by an Irish band at the Broad street station . . . It will escort him to his hotel . . . Dan will then go to mass at the Cathedral in Philadelphia.

Ray Fabiani says there are 200,000 members of Irish societies within ten miles of the center of Philadelphia . . . He looks for a capacity crowd when Dan steps into action . . . Ernie Dusek had two stitches taken in his head after he was hit by a chair tossed from the gallery by a fan at Camden, N. J. . . . Long chairs should be kept out of galleries in buildings where wrestling is staged.

In Canada the galleries are screened in, which makes it impossible for daffy fans to molest wrestlers or hockey players . . . Charles F. Adams considered screening in the gallery at the Garden a few years ago when popeyed hockey fans were tossing missiles at players and officials.

Andy Callahan, who has been for the Coast on Monday with Lou Brouillard, Honey Mellody and Johnny Buckley, may remain away from home until spring . . . He is a good card in California and has offers for four matches.

Boxing is picking up in interest in California as in Massachusetts . . . Barney Ross is aiming for a return bout with Jimmy McLarnin . . . If Ross can regain the welterweight championship he will vacate the lightweight title.

BABE Startled by HORSE

HOMESICKNESS GRIPS RUTH

UNNOTICED IN PARIS STREETS

By Associated Press

Paris, Jan. 19—Babe Ruth is homesick.

Now on the closing stages of a world tour, the great home-run slugger is "sick of foreign languages, sick of foreign money" and "aching to get back to New York."

It remained for Paris to hand him his biggest jolt. Here he passes along the streets unrecognized. The special attention that usually follows him wherever he goes is missing. The average Frenchman never heard of him, nor baseball either.

He has done little or no sightseeing since he has been here. He ducked one tour by going to an American boys' school where he got one lad to pitch to him while he batted out towering flies.

"You know, some of those American kids born over here never so much as saw a baseball game," he said, simply amazed that such a state of affairs could be.

But if Paris has disappointed him, it likewise furnished him with his biggest thrill of the hour. Let him tell it:

"Mrs. Ruth and I were coming along the street and all of a sudden I yelled for Mrs. Ruth to stop. What do you think we saw? There was a horse with his legs crossed. If I had a camera I would have snapped him sure."

FULLER RING FORFEIT IS POSTED

New York, Jan. 19 (INS)—Dan Carroll, manager of Sammy Fuller, Boston lightweight, today deposited with the New York State Athletic Commission a certified check for $1000 for weight and appearance of Fuller in a 15-round bout with Lou Ambers at Madison Square Garden, March 1, at 133 pounds.

Barbara Holmes gives her patrons a card of introduction from the bureau to the agency or person offering the rental.

CANADIENS TEST BRUINS

Dandurand Leads French Tonight

Heads Up

BRUINS TACKLE IMPROVED SIX TONIGHT

By Bill Grimes

Bon jour, Monsieur Dandurand et Les Canadiens.

For the first time in years, Canadiens are in town with Leo Dandurand at the helm, and tonight the debonair Frenchman will direct his proteges against Les Bruins at the Garden.

Years ago Dandurand piloted Canadiens to a Stanley Cup and two Canadian division championships.

Upon the acquisition of Cecil Hart

he removed himself for the bench; that is to say, he sat to one side and watched Cecil and then Newsy Lalonde direct the play.

Recently Lalonde was removed and once again Leo elected to sit in.

Under Lalonde the Canadiens were about as disorganized as could be. For about a fortnight even the nothing words of the suave Leo were unable to improve the club's morale.

Last Thursday in the Forum, however, Canadiens met Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Smythe clan was an odds-on favorite. But, lo and behold, the Frenchmen up and took the Leafs into camp.

Canadiens have always been front runners and that victory over Toronto was just the tonic necessary to start them going places again.

DUCK PIN

Willimantic, Conn., Jan. 19—The fifth annual eastern duck pin sweepstakes will be held here February 16, it was announced today. Thirty-two entries have been filed from Connecticut and the eastern seaboard to date and a total of 50 is expected.

Full Card of Basket Games

By Bob Ahearn

Plenty of competition is on tap for local semi-pro and amateur basketball quintets tonight.

Featuring the list is the Park Department League schedule of 40 games this evening. Eleven gyms will be in use for these tilts, four games at each court.

Some of the outstanding games in the Park League competition include Burros Seniors vs. Mavericks; South End House vs. Mozarts; St. Thomas Sr. vs. South Boston Cubs; Murphy Club vs. Cahill Club; Ramblers vs. Auburns.

The bewildered House of David quintet from Benton Harbor, Mich., will be the attraction at the Boston Y. M. H. A. this evening.

One of the largest crowds of the season is expected to pack Seaver street court to watch the first local appearance of the House of David five this year.

St. Thomas A. A. and the Y. M. H. A. Jewels start in the preliminary in a Greater Boston League encounter.

Crimson Independents visit the West End House; Boston Boys' Club, Charlestown district, plays host to the Haverhill Boys' Club; McCarthy Club of Winthrop entertains the Chelsea Y. M. H. A. in other games of interest.

Swampscott Maroons, leaders in the North Shore Girls' Basketball League, meet the St. Mary's five at the Lynn Y. M. C. A. this evening. If the Maroons are beaten, both quintets will go into a tie for first place.

Fuller to Turn Author Monday

Little Sammy Fuller, whose rise and fall and subsequent rise once more has amazed the boxing world, has doffed boxing gloves for the moment in favor of the typewriter.

The North End Italian, one of the leading contenders for the lightweight championship, will relate the highlights of his interesting fighting career for Boston American readers. They start on these pages Monday.

Fuller will tell, among other things, how he scored four knockouts in one evening; the hardest man he ever faced; some freak happenings in the ring and how he once knocked out Jim Maloney in the gymnasium.

Monday is the date. Watch for them.

BAER THROUGH WITH GARDEN

By Universal Service

New York, Jan. 19—Months of negotiations between Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, and Madison Square Garden directors took a sensational turn when Hoffman announced from Miami that Baer is through with the world-famous sporting corporation.

Hoffman declared that the heavyweight champion would continue to fight for the Milk Fund, which sponsored his match with Primo Carnera, but that he would not let the Milk Fund sever its connection with the Garden.

Hoffman frankly admitted he had been "tossed around" by the Garden.

CAVALCADE Arrives on Coast

Santa Anita Park, Cal., Jan. 19 (UP)—Cavalcade, equine champion of 1934, and favorite for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap February 23, has arrived at Arcadia to prepare for the coming classic.

The ace of Mrs. Isobel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable was reported in excellent shape despite his long trip here from South Carolina. He has recovered completely from his cracked hoof.

Harvard's Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League game with Cornell at the Indoor Athletic Building tonight, the first meeting of the season between these traditional rivals, offers one of the most exciting personal duels to be seen this year.

The Crimson will present its newly discovered star, Leavitt White, in contest with Louis Freed, Cornell's pee-wee shooting ace.

Freed is one of the outstanding players in the league. Only five feet, seven inches and weighing less than 140 pounds, he's a midget on a team of giants.

White came into his own against Penn.

LINEUP CHANGES LOOM IN MAJORS

MANY INFIELD SHAKEUPS DUE

By Joe Cashman

The report that Babe Ruth might turn out a book this year has brought guffaws from several critics. The Bambino may have the last laugh.

If the big fellow were to furnish the inside story of his hectic career to an experienced biographer, the result couldn't miss being a best-seller.

The National League magnates lost little time in agreeing with President Ford Frick that baseball and dog racing don't mix.

The special meeting to discuss the Braves' problems hardly had been called to order before the club owners announced that they wouldn't consider the Tribe sharing the Wigwam with the hounds.

It looks as if the youthful Mr. Frick is boss of the circuit in fact as well as name.

Southern fans are to be given plenty of opportunity to judge the difference between a big league pennant-winner and tail-ender this spring. Detroit's Tigers, American League champions, and Cincinnati's Reds, National League celebrities, have arranged a lengthy exhibition series, including ten games in as many towns between April 4 and 13.

The Tigers are the only American League club that appears satisfied to open another campaign with its 1934 infield. Mickey Cochrane will string along with Greenberg, Gehringer, Owen and Rogell.

The Red Sox will have a new first-sacker and Manager Joe Cronin replacing Lyn Lary at short. Lary will fill Cronin's old berth at Washington.

The Athletics will try a rookie named Hooks at first to let Jimmy Foxx move behind the bat. Lou Gehrig is the only veteran Yankee infielder sure of his job.

The Browns will use Johnny Burnett, secured from the Indians, at short or third. Cleveland plans to try Louis Berger, New Orleans rookie, at second and shift "Bad News" Hale to third to relieve the ancient Willie Kamm.

Jimmy Dykes, White Sox pilot, is talking about converting "Mule" Haas into a first-sacker.

He's the Boss

Ford Frick, freshman president of National League. He seems to have Braves' situation well in hand.

Florida. It's an old custom of the "Shanty-man" to reach training camp about a month before work is carded to start.

He'll have company down in the grapefruit territory this year in the person of Nantasket Bobby Brown, who's been there with his mother since before Christmas.

Y. M. C. A. MEET 4 Champs Defend

Four 1934 champions will be on hand this evening to defend their titles in the 19th annual track and field games at the Boston Y. M. C. A.

The four are Jim Sandler, Northeastern, high jump; Al Hicks, B. U., dash; Phil Good, Bowdoin, hurdles, and John Lever, Lawrence 'Y', 300-yard dash.

There will be 12 events on the program. Seven of them, five track and two field, will be handicap.

14	Donna Day.... 103	Sullivan	20-1
17	Slave 99	Hibert	20-1
18	Delano 113	McDermott	20-1

PROTAGONIST gets the top figures on his good Tropical Park form. BUY STRAIGHT figures to outlast the fast working JANE FOSTER. The latter may need a race.

ERLA, LAURA S., POLY ROYAL

SECOND RACE—$800, maiden, two-year-olds, fillies. Nursery course.

11	Erla 112	Corbett	10-1
11	Laura S. 112	Horn	8-1
2	Poly Royal 112	Parvin	8-1
3	Masted Gal 112	Hunter	6-1

18	Cohort Lass .. 112	Hanka	20-1
20	Maman 113	Meade	20-1
9	Everneat 112	Callahan	15-1

ERLA, a well bred daughter of Bull Dog and Broomiola, has worked fast for this. LAURA S. displayed good speed while racing Greenly last time. POLY ROYAL appears next best.

IMPROMPTU, HIGHEST POINT, MOANE KEALA

THIRD RACE—$1000, claiming, four-year-olds and up, six furlongs:

4	Impromptu 111	Gilbert	10-1
2	Highest Point.111	Lynch	4-1
1	Moane Keala.x103	Parvin	6-1

10	Owen 106	Callahan	20-1
9	Lotus Bud 108	Viltena	20-1
6	Peace Treaty.. 103	Winters	20-1

IMPROMPTU was favored over better ones on opening day but had scant chance with the break. HIGHEST POINT figures better than MOANE KEALA. The latter is under a light package.

DANCING DOLL, CURRANT, DARK LADY

FOURTH RACE—$1000, allowances, three-year-olds, six furlongs.

5	Dancing Doll ..113	Meade	4-1
8	Currant 113	Gilbert	6-1

16	Jamieon 116	Porter	15-1
18	Star Fire x104	Lynch	20-1
14	Fleet Volta .. 109	Fagan	20-1
4	Legionary ..x107	Dupre	15-1
7	Fairwicke 107	Wright	15-1
13	Feudal Lord .. 116	R. Watson	15-1

The fleet Volta Maid may take the track and never be headed in this affair. BAND WAGON looms the danger. STONE MARTIN is entered in the strength of an imposing record at the other town. STONE MARTIN should break into the picture.

FOXLAND HALL, AL NEIMAN, LIMBUS

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, four-year-olds and up, one and one-sixteenth miles:

6	Foxland Hall..x113	G. Watson	6-1
4	Al Neiman 113	Arcaro	6-1
8	Limbus x113	Lynch	6-1
3	Sweet Pal 113	Meade	6-1

PUBLIC Battles CRIME

LAWS BETTER ENFORCED

By HAROLD E. DONNELL
Supt. of Prisons of Maryland

The agitation occasioned by the attorney-general's crime conference in Washington should, during the coming year, have a healthy effect upon the public in general and particularly upon the law-enforcing units of our government both state and federal.

Until we have reached the point where we become crime conscious and deplore the conditions which are causitive factors of crime, little can be accomplished in its eradication.

Greed, avarice, selfishness and lack of concern for our brothers, together with our heterogenous population, has placed us in the position which we now hold as being the most lawless nation in the world.

Quick Conviction

It is important to have quick apprehension of the criminal, a quick and certain conviction for his acts and an intelligent and rehabilitative program in caring for him after his conviction.

Laws on our statutes which are unenforcible should be repealed, and the enforcement of the laws which are necessary for the protection of society should apply to all and not be in the interest of the few.

A preventive course and a rehabilitative course must of necessity be provided for the bulk of our criminal element which in the main is made up of an inadequate group, oftentimes the victim of circumstances. I believe firmly in the indeterminate sentence.

Parole System

I believe in probation with restitution for the accidental, occasional person who has become involved in crime, and a parole system, properly manned, free of sentimentality but as a protective measure for the handling of all released prisoners.

I further believe that the closest unity of relationship should exist between the police, the prosecuting attorneys, the courts of sentence, probation departments, penal institutions and parole departments.

Guide to New Books

By Miles Alden

THE AMERICAN DIPLOMATIC GAME—Drew Pearson and Constantine Brown — Doubleday, Doran.

Those who remember "The Washington Merry-Go-Round"—and who doesn't?—will look to this book in part by one of the men who paid with his job for collaborating on the former, for the backstairs' gossip of all the embassies in the New World and the Old.

They will not be disappointed. The book bristles with crackling anecdote, bits of dynamite that no diplomat would repeat while wearing his silk hat and his red sash. But it is something more than this.

In these pages is refreshingly recorded the story of a decade of international relations—a decade that began with the high-minded internationalism of the Kellogg Pact to outlaw war and that ended with the frank and realistic nationalism of the present day that recognizes each country's prime need of taking care of itself first.

If you really want to know what the Chaco War is all about—or what happened to the United States when Japan invaded Manchuria—this is your book, and it's a good one.

A HOUSE DIVIDED—By Pearl S. Buck—John Day Co.

In this week's New Yorker Clifton Fadiman takes Mrs. Buck to task for adopting the style of the Bible for this, her latest novel about the China of our day. And that is the most valid objection that can be raised against "A House Divided."

Here is a story that by all rights should have been even better than "The Good Earth"—which was very good, indeed. But it falls far snort of Mrs. Buck's earlier work for the simple reason that it does not have been written to be an epic.

But this is scolding enough for Mrs. Buck. After all, there may be some who will like her better now that she has gone solemn in this story of the grandchildren of Wang Lung, the farmer of "The Good Earth."

But we doubt if they will like these children as much as they did their grandparents. They are too wishy-washy. With the benefits of Eastern tradition and Western education, they can't make up their minds which way to go. A dull group.

But, in spite of its stylistic fault, not a dull story. Mrs. Buck is no good that she can afford to be a little bad. But we wish she hadn't been.

'Pinochle? Easy as Pie!'

MRS. WILLIAM H. ANDERS MISS ROSAMOND VAHEY MRS. CHARLES H. INNES

Between sessions of a bridge whist tournament in progress in the Hotel Victoria, these women card experts are trying out smart society's newest fad, the old game, pinochle. You pronounce it "pea-knuckle." In the group are Mrs. William H. Anders of Concord; Miss Rosamond Vahey of Boston; and Mrs. Charles H. Innes, wife of the prominent Suffolk county attorney. Miss Vahey is acting as instructor. "Easy as pie," she calls pinochle technique. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Pinochle, one of the world's oldest card games, is the last word, my dears.

If you would be as modern as tomorrow, learn how to play it.

Miss Rosamond Vahey, Boston's four-star bridge and golf champion, says it's "easy as pie" and agrees with P. Hal Sims that it's the ideal method for training for a bridge tournament.

With Mrs. William H. Anders of Concord and Mrs. Charles H. Innis, wife of Boston's well-known lawyer, Miss Vahey, whiled away time between rounds at the bridge tournament now in progress at the Boston Chess Club in the Victoria Hotel.

It is the New England championship for Women Bridge Players tournament, held annually in Boston, and Miss Vahey is defending the New England championship.

"And what better way to build up my defense," says she, "than by training between rounds on pinochle?"

Second Section LOCAL NEWS

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1935

Listen, World
By ELSIE ROBINSON

You can be what you want—but suppose you don't wanna?

"I'd like," you say, "to make a record.

"It sure must be swell to be a Big Shot—or even near the head of the line—but what chance have I?"

* * *

"Yes," says you, "I know the answer—

"You're going to say YOU CAN BE ANYTHING YOU WANT—WITHIN REASON.

Elsie Robinson

"It's a good answer—and I know it's true, sometimes.

"I've seen it tried and it worked—

"But there's one thing you're overlooking."

* * *

"There's one catch in that scheme.

"One fact that's apt to put the whole racket haywire—

"And that's this—

* * *

"You CAN be what you want.

"But suppose you DON'T WANT—

"Suppose you hit one of those dead-calm times

"When, for the life of you, you can't WANT anything.

"Then what?"

* * *

"It's one thing," says you, "to like or envy noble, hard-working eggs

"And wish, vaguely, you were like 'em—

"But it's quite another to get so steamed up

"With red-hot desire and go-get-'em ambition

"That you leap into action yourself

"And make things come your way.

"So what, if anything, can be done about THAT?"

* * *

That's what YOU say to me—
And now here's what I say to you.

* * *

The trouble with you, partner,
Is that you think you've gotta be
Red hot to do anything.
That's nonsense, Cockeyed nonsense!
That's the way monkeys feel about doing things—
Or babies.
Babies and monkeys won't work unless they're excited.
The minute things go dull
They lose interest and stop hustling.

There's the difference between a man and a monkey—

Can you keep going when you're not steamed up, or can't you?

You CAN be what you want—
Even if you've stopped wanting!
Even if you're too tired,
Too sick and discouraged, too sore and disgusted
To feel anything or desire anything.
You can still be what you want—

IF YOU'LL GO AHEAD AND MAKE THE GESTURES!

* * *

Flat times, flop times, blah times,
Black times—they come to everybody.
No use trying to escape them—
No use waiting for them to pass—
Either you take them, or you TAKE THE COUNT.

But how can you take them?
BY JUST GOING ON—PARKING YOUR HEART AND LETTING YOUR BRAIN RUN THE JOB.

* * *

That's the difference between a man and a monkey.
A monkey quits when his blood stops boiling.
WITH HIS BRAIN ON THE JOB.

* * *

So there's the dope—the dope on success—
The dope on Life—the dope on YOU.
If you want to BE something—
If you want to DO something—
You can do it, you can be it—
IF YOU'LL KEEP UP YOUR WALLOP
THROUGH HOT TIMES OR COLD.

WIFE WRITES "LOVE NOTE" IN COURT

(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

MRS. THELMA SHAW OF LYNN

Wife Copies Love Note In Court

A "24-minute kiss," and parts of a love letter featured the testimony in the divorce action brought by Murray W. Shaw, of Lynn, in Salem Probate Court.

Mrs. Thelma A. Shaw denied vigorously any knowledge of the letter and wrote from dictation parts of the letter shown in evidence

Judge Edward B. O'Brien was studying the handwriting today in an endeavor to determine if she could be the author.

George F. Lorenzon, named as co-respondent, was within a few feet of Mrs. Shaw as she wrote

Mrs. Shaw vigorously denied the kiss, too.

CAMBRIDGE PAIR Saved in Hotel Fire

New Bedford, Jan. 19—Five persons including a Cambridge couple were saved today when fire swept through the five-story Lincoln Hotel here

The fire started in the basement and spread through an air shaft to the roof before it was discovered

The rescued included Mr. and Mrs. William Sours, of Cambridge, Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips, Providence, R. I., and Antone Airuda, of Hartford, Ct. Damage was estimated at $6,000

PROTEST ON LEAGUE COURT FILED HERE

DORGAN ACTS IN LEGISLATURE

Joint resolutions protesting against any adherence by the United States to the Court of the League of Nations were filed today with the Legislature by Representative Thomas Dorgan of Dorchester, Democrat.

They also provided that a copy of the resolutions, as passed, be forwarded by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook to President Roosevelt and the entire Congressional delegation from Massachusetts.

Dorgan's action followed the receipt of a letter from Frank J. Curtis, chairman of political activities of the League of Nations Association, Massachusetts Branch, 40 Mt. Vernon street.

The communication, which it is understood also was sent to each senator and representative, analyzed the recent vote taken in 113 towns and cities of the commonwealth on the question of adherence to the World Court.

Failed to Pass

In the districts, the question failed of passage because of the failure of voters to show enough interest to vote for or against the proposal. A majority of votes must be cast in this state on any proposal to qualify it.

Representative Dorgan said today the attempt to put the United States into the League over a previous very definite rejection of such an entangling alliance by the voters should arouse the people to the danger that confronts the country from the "enemies of America," Dorgan said:

"We have had one taste of what it means for America to depart from its traditional policy of minding its own business, namely in the World War. Our former allies won't even pay their just debts to us.

"I think it is about time that something was done to check up on these un-American organizations.

"The organization here in Massachusetts, with its elaborate headquarters, appears to have plenty of funds to work with. It would be interesting to trace these funds to their source.

QUINCY POLICE Promotions Probed

An investigation of the Quincy police department, with special attention to the promotion of several officers since the re-election of Mayor Charles A. Ross, was begun today.

The inquiry is being conducted by opponents of the mayor, who have been seeking his removal from office on charges of violation of the corrupt practices act.

Bandits Rob Bank

Handley, Tex., Jan. 19 (INS)—Four men, armed with a machine guns and pistols, robbed the First National Bank of $500 and escaped toward Fort Worth today.

CHARLES TRAVIS EVELYN JOHN

Not even on his day off could Fireman Charles Travis, above, escape the crackle of flames. While he was at home today on Plainfield street, Jamaica Plain, a blaze broke out in the basement of a nearby building on Brookley road, imperiling six families. Travis carried the baby, little Evelyn John, to safety. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

FIREMAN, OFF DUTY, RESCUES CHILD

Fire, which started in the basement of this three-story wooden apartment house on Brookley road, Jamaica Plain, drove six families from their homes today. Several children were carried to the street. Flames were working upward into the building as the picture was taken.

6 FAMILIES FLEE Jamaica Plain Fire

Fire of undetermined cause today did $5000 damage in a three-story dwelling at 53 Brookley road, Jamaica Plain

Six families, 15 persons, including six young children, were forced to flee.

EVERETT PLANS Check on Welfare

Mayor James A. Roche of Everett, through his secretary, Joseph Fisher, today stated that he would ask the police department to check all welfare cases, beginning on January 27.

The drive is to be carried out with the intention of listing all needy and distressed families and to ascertain if there are any families receiving aid who are not entitled to it.

Snow Breaks Leg

Carmen Corciani, 14, of Fourth street, Cambridge, built an igloo today, went inside, and sustained a broken leg when the snow collapsed and burned him.

O.O. McINTYRE NEW YORK Day By Day

New York, Jan. 19—Tom Geraghty has a London address that would be coveted by every writer. It is: "Byron's Hayloft, Hamilton Mews, Park Lane, W. I."

The mews is a cake-wedge between Park Lane and Piccadilly and the actual hayloft where Byron wrote his last stuff before leaving England forever.

The house was in front facing Piccadilly and the hayloft is broken up with old rafters and skylights and has many things of Byron's there, including books and an old sword given to him by Sir Walter Scott

O. O. McIntyre

The idea came from those charming pen sketches in Henri Murger's book on the Bohemians of 1830-40 From one of the chapters "La Boheme" was drawn So much gossip from London at breakfast, I'm going to swing the column to the other side for the day.

Cole Porter has also authored and composed the raging hit in London and on the continent. A freak song—"Mrs. Otis Regrets She Cannot Have Lunch Today, Madame."

It was a song he improvised as a gag at a house party. A scout heard and grabbed it for Charlot's Revue. Now every messenger whistles it.

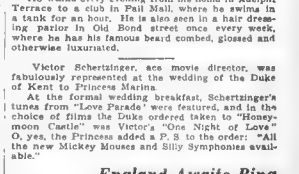
What! Jimmy on Time?

Jimmy Walker's page for the Sunday Dispatch is taking on. It's mostly profound comment with a soupcon of wise-cracks and sprinkled with a bit of American slang

He has never been late for an edition so far. The nostalgia rumors are bunk. He's crazy about his cottage in Dorking and has a small suite at the Park Lane hotel

Hannen Swaffer, the critic and columnist, is considering several offers to come to America for a time. Although he has a slight impediment, he is the high powered orator at the big labor meetings

"Swaff" dresses like the old-time actor as well as strutting like one. He says that since there are more good actors he must act and dress like one. He ties into Richard Bennett now and then for a stroll



Shaw the Pedestrian

George Bernard Shaw, who used to be a bit gun-shy of street crowds, has now become a familiar figure along the pavements. A confirmed pedestrian, he glides along like an American Indian.

He walks every evening from his home in Adelphi Terrace to a club in Pall Mall, where he swims in a tank for an hour. He is also seen in a hair dressing parlor in Old Bond street once every week, where he has his famous beard combed, glossed and otherwise luxuriated.

Victor Schertzinger, ace movie director, was fabulously represented at the wedding of the Duke of Kent to Princess Marina.

At the formal wedding breakfast, Schertzinger's tunes from "Love Parade" were featured, and in the choice of films the Duke ordered taken to "Honeymoon Castle" were Victor's "One Night of Love" O, yes, the Princess added a P. S to the order: "All the new Mickey Mouses and Silly Symphonies available."

England Awaits Bing

Cord, the American motor magnate, keeps a suite in the Dorchester the year around and is the best known "early riser" ever domiciled in the West End.

He frequently leaves a call for 4 a. m., breakfasts a half hour later then calls up friends for a motor trip in the country or a flight in a plane he keeps at an airport

The leading London movies in the West End still get $4, top. And one is lucky to get in if it a a good film. Long lines coil for the unreserved cheaper seats at 50 and 75 cents

Chief reason for turnout is poor radio offerings.

Nobody stays home to listen. Vaudeville is also back to pre-war standards. The King and Queen still sit in their old box at the Palladium and the princes drop in almost every week

Belle Baker is an outstanding attraction. All anxiously await Bing Crosby, offered the biggest pay in history of the English theater. But he cannot accept just now, on account of radio and movie contracts.

Mack Sennett, who is trying to promote a London production, has not read "Father Goose," the Gene Fowler biography of "Mr. Sennett" but has managed to look at the pictures

They like Sennett around London Indeed, when he goes to the Savoy grill they pilot him to Charles Frohman's favorite chair, which bears a memory plate in honor of the producer

Joe Coyne, the American actor, who played in the original "Merry Widow," is another favorite. They like us in perfidious Albion. But won't pay us!

ROXBURY HIJACKS GET $8000 LOAD

Four armed "hijackers" kidnaped a night watchman from a Roxbury garage today and made off with a truckload of leather. Truck and cargo were valued at $8000.

It was the fourth time within three weeks that such a robbery had been executed. The hijacking is believed to be the work of an organized gang operating between Boston and New York.

Today's victim was William Holmes of Newton street, Brighton, employed at a garage at 1246 Massachusetts avenue, Roxbury.

According to Holmes, two of the bandits threw a bag over his head, dragged him into a car, drove to the Blue Hills and there gave him a severe beating. He was hurled into a snowbank.

Meanwhile the remaining two bandits had made off with the truckload of leather. The truck was owned by the C. T. Hartnett Trucking Company

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"Claws of the River Bottom"

Stark Terror Lurks in Eerie Border Death-Trap

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well sir, fellow adventurers, I've got a yarn for you today that reminds me of a little adventuring I once did on my own account. You know, it is not so long ago that I took a horseback ride with General Pershing, over a pretty good sized chunk of a country called Mexico, looking for a tough egg who had been doing some raiding over on the American side of the river. So when I got a letter a while ago from Garrett J. Fitzsimons of 109-28 216th st., Queens Village, L. I., it was like hearing from a long-lost brother.

Floyd Gibbons

That letter, boys and girls, started off like this: "In the Summer of 1916 the bandit, Villa, had caused such disturbances along our Mexican border that the National Guard was called into active service, and I enlisted in the Seventh Regiment, N. Y. N. G., and was sent to McAllen, Texas."

Well, sir, I read that far, and got up and did a war dance. "Why," I said to myself, "I sort of monkeyed around in that Mexican ruckus, too. This guy and I are practically buddies." And then I went on to read the rest of Garry Fitzsimmons' yarn—a yarn that sent the shivers up and down my spine. And when I had finished, I decided that I may have had the time of my life down there chasing old Pancho Villa, but Garry Fitzsimons got the thrill of his.

It was August, and a doggone hot August, as Augusts can get to be down there on the border. There wasn't much doing in the way of excitement. Just taps, and reveille, and tequila and—guard duty. Garry was doing guard duty on the night he stumbled into the big thrill of his, and now he is willing to admit that sometimes there is a little excitement in that old humdrum business of walking your post and yelling "Who goes there!" at stray dogs rooting around in the underbrush.

On this August night, Garry was on outpost duty at a camp near the town of Hidalgo. He was taking his regular turn at guard tour, walking back and forth along a two mile stretch of the river, meeting up, at the end of his route, with a man from the next outpost down the line. The old Rio Grande was pretty dry at the time, due to the heat and the lack of rainfall. About half of the river bottom was showing—all baked and cracked and hardened by the blistering August sun, and Garry, wherever he could, walked along this dry bottom, because the banks were covered with cactus and heavy underbrush, and that underbrush had quite a few diamond-back rattlers bedding down in it.

It was about two o'clock in the morning when Garry started. By that time it was getting cool, and there was a bright, beautiful Texas moon hanging up in the sky, and all in all, he wasn't a bit sorry he had joined the army.

The trip up was uneventful. Not a sign of trouble. Not a sound anywhere. But the trip back didn't go so well. Halfway down the home stretch, Garry thought he heard a noise on the Mexican side of the stream, and walked down close to the water to investigate.

Too close. He got down to the water all right, but on the way back he stepped on something that looked like solid ground and suddenly felt it give way under him. He tried to step out and sank in deeper. Then he realized that he was caught in quicksand.

Still Garry wasn't overly excited. He knew he could summon help by firing two shots from his rifle, but that would create a hullabaloo that would turn out half the army. Garry figured he could get out of that quicksand by himself if he didn't have a lot of heavy accoutrement weighing him down, so he threw his rifle, bayonet, belt and ammunition up on the dry bank in front of him. Then he turned to the business of getting up on that same dry bank himself.

He put his hands down and tried to push himself up. That didn't work. He tried to lie down and roll. No good either. He decided that he'd just have to shoot off his rifle and summon aid, and then, with a sickening feeling in his chest he realized that he'd thrown his rifle up on the bank—far out of his reach.

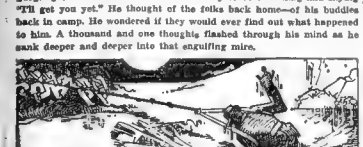
Panic hit Garry about that time. He was in to his waist now, and going in deeper every minute. He let out a yell—another and another—and settled back to wait for results. No answer. Only the soft, sinister gurgling of the river that seemed to Garry to be chuckling and saying "I'll get you yet." He thought of the folks back home—of his buddies back in camp. He wondered if they would ever find out what happened to him. A thousand and one thoughts flashed through his mind as he sank deeper and deeper into that engulfing mire.



He let out another yell—listened. This time he got an answer. Far down the line somebody yelled back, and it was the sweetest music Garry ever heard. But it seemed hours—hours while he sank, and sank—before a soldier came up on a trot to find out what was the matter.

The soldier came trotting up to Garry, but Garry yelled and told him to keep away. It was hours more—so it seemed to Garry—while the soldier went back to the outpost. Still more hours before he returned with a sergeant and a detail of men. By this time Garry had sunk to his armpits. The men couldn't get within thirty feet of him, and there was no rope to be had anywhere in the neighborhood.

It was the sergeant who had the idea that did the trick. He took the straps from all the rifles in the detail, hooked them together and threw them out to Garry. Then, while Garry prayed that the straps would hold, eight men tugged him out of the quicksand. Garry got back to camp that morning, a little bit scared of this humdrum business called guard duty.

And the moral of that story, boys and girls, is: Send in your adventures now. Don't be a bunch of stick-in-the-muds like Garry. It's the easiest way I know of to earn ten bucks. And you're always got a shot at that hundred dollar prize, too. And Monday be ready to listen to a new club member. He tells how a postal worker was held up at gunpoint.

$10.00 EVERY DAY AND $100.00 EVERY MONTH is what Floyd Gibbons will pay American readers to prove that more thrilling and interesting TRUE adventures happen in YOUR life and in the lives of your friends than anything fiction writers can invent. YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS

Who Said It?

"An honest man's the noblest work of God."

The genius of Alexander Pope shines out in so many lines that he would have been the most quoted man on Broadway if he lived today . . . that, of course, if he hadn't the competition of Shakespeare, who originated many expressions still used as new by the world. Shakespeare, while giving man the breaks, also added a description: "God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man." Thomas Burke told how you can determine homo sapiens: "Man is an animal that cooks his victuals." And Thomas Carlyle cynically observed: "Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure there is one rascal less in the world."

Words of Wise

It is better to live rich than to die rich.—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Mercy is twice blessed. It does good to him who knows it and for whom it is done.—Shakespeare.

A word of praise helps very much, if every one says the praise now and then. It helps the wheels of life to move.—Charles Dickens.

HOLLAND

COTTON

Broker Now Stage Producer

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Actor-managers in the theaters are not so numerous.

George M. Cohan is one. Eva le Gallienne was once one.

George Holland

Guthrie McClintic, presents the actor-manager of Miss Cornell's ventures. Walter Hampden is an actor-manager in every particular. Bert Lytell is the co-producer and star-manager of "The First Legion," which comes to the Plymouth Theater Monday evening for a two-weeks' engagement, and Mr. Lytell, actor-manager with authority as he is, is not quite a bona fide specimen of the species. Why?

* * *

Mr. Lytell has a partner, and his partner bears the name of Phil Green. Mr. Green is a very mysterious Mr. Green to your chronicler. I heard about him first from Kay Corbett, the dancing-tutor.

"Surely you know Phil Green," Miss Corbett insisted. "He's the cotton-broker."

That conversation happened about a year ago. But your correspondent did not know Mr. Green.

Then Marc Lachman, a New Yorker, insisted that I must know Phil Green. Marc was representing Lew Brown, and a half-dozen other theatrical accounts, including Mr. Green.

"Phil Green is the Boston cotton broker, and he is now a producer," Marc made known. "And watch him, he will be a big hit."

And yet we failed to recall Mr. Green.

Well, Mr. Green is co-producer of "The First Legion," and I hope he strides into the office and introduces himself.

"The First Legion" tells the story of life in a Jesuit house of studies. There must be thousands of graduates of Boston College and Holy Cross who would be interested in attending a dramatists' interpretation of life in a Jesuit house of studies.

* * *

Going back a bit, Bert Lytell is actor-manager of "The First Legion," in collaboration. In his cast, in the second-best part, is Charles Coburn. Do you remember "The Better 'Ole"? Mr. Coburn was actor-manager in "The Better 'Ole," and a year or so ago, he was actor-manager of "The Yellow Jacket," a revival.

It seems that many actor-managers are working for hire.

But in event that you are inclined to the conclusion that actor-managers eventually wind up acting for some other manager, please do not be so sure.

Leslie Howard in "The Petrified Forest," the same show that played here until very recently is New York's biggest dramatic hit (as Boston predicted). Mr. Howard owns 80 per cent of "The Petrified Forest" and he is actor as well as (definitely and controllingly) manager.

* * *

Martyn Green, the great character actor of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, extends his congratulations to Boston for Our Fair City's propriety in getting to the chairs of the Colonial in time for the curtain-raising Monday night brings "Trial By Jury" and "The Pirates of Penzance," to the Colonial, and "Trial by Jury" starts promptly as advertised.

Los Angeles, Jan. 19 (US)—A curious coincidence! Paramount has been working for five months on "Guns," a story of a jail break much like the one which took place in San Quentin on Wednesday. F. E. Paramore wrote the yarn.

Paramount's story, starring Sylvia Sidney and featuring Fred MacMurray, goes into immediate production. Curiously enough the scenario tells of prison officials being held hostage while a dangerous gang makes their get-away through the aid of criminals on parole.

Louella O. Parsons

Had these San Quentin prisoners been successful in their escape there is little doubt that another Dillinger gang might have had its inception. I hope Mr. Paramore explains all this in his story.

Evelyn Venable in comedy? That a thing that could never have happened when Evelyn was under her papa's roof. He had his own definite ideas and Evelyn obeyed them even to letting the sickening publicity of Hollywood's only unkissed actress be circulated. Well, since she became Mrs. Hal Mohr, wife of the cameraman, she is her own boss and her first picture is a Hal Roach comedy produced and directed by Sam Taylor called "The Girl is Mine." She plays a modern, sophisticated young woman and she has with her in the cast Robert Young, Reginald Denny, Burton Churchill, Joseph Cawthorne, and Ferdinand Gottschalk.

Guess who is one of Aimee Semple McPherson's most ardent admirers? Max Reinhardt, no less! He has been at the Ambassus Temple two nights in succession to see the presentation of Aimee's sacred opera, "Bells of Bethlehem," written and produced by Aimee in commemoration of the 12th anniversary of Angelus Temple and Aimee's own 25th year as an evangelist. Reinhardt believes that staged professionally Aimee's opera offers possibilities for the screen and stage.

A big conference is scheduled sometime within the next 10 days or two weeks between Max Baer and the Paramount Co. Max will come on here from Miami to talk over a new story which Albert Kaufman is getting in readiness. The heavyweight champion turned down "Kid on the Cuffs" as being unsuited to his talents. Paramount has, because of this decision, been looking for many months to get a vehicle mutually satisfactory. "Kid on the Cuffs" is by Damon Runyon and was adapted by Adela Rogers St. Johns. Despite the distinguished authorship, it didn't please Maxie.

Now that "Under Pressure," the latest Robert Kane picture, starring Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, is all canned and approved, Hoh is ready for his next film starts shooting January 28th on "Hold That Tiger," a play by Ben Hecht and Rose Caylor. And the cast Bob feels would suit the critical Mr. Hecht himself, who always has ideas on anything that concerns movies or his plays. Claire Trevor, Fox's blonde juvenile, and Lew Ayres are teamed, with Zasu Pitts, Jack Haley, and Mitchell and Durant furnishing the comedy. Melville Brown will direct.

What a treat in store for the air forces stationed at San Diego when "Devil Dogs of the Air" opens there January 29! Air scenes thrilling and breath-taking and beautifully staged right in San Diego's front yard will interest not only the navy who assisted in producing this first Cosmopolitan-Warner Brothers production but everyone who is interested in Uncle Sam's marines. Because the President's birthday falls on January 30 and Warners are giving a party in Hollywood on that day, the San Diego premiere has been set a day ahead.

Snapshots of Hollywood

By a mutual agreement on both sides the settlement made in the AL ROGELL divorce case is a secret; all Hollywood believed that the divorce will be granted quietly and not aired in public; EVA GREGORY ROGELL plans to resume her career as a screen actress under her screen name of MARIAN DOUGLASS MAE CLARKE now well enough to return to the screen, waiting for the right picture. RAMON NOVARRO creating no end of a stir at the Russian Ballet in tweed pants, leather jacket and sports scarf; Hollywood liberally represented at the ballet each night; EDNA MAY OLIVER, SARI MARITZA, ANNA STEN and her husband, and JOE VON STERNBERG applauding the dancers; FRED STONE to be met at the train when he reaches here tomorrow by many of his friends, among whom will be HENRY WILSON, who calls Stone his favorite father-in-law; YOUNG WILSON expected to have the legal right to that name some day. ELLEN MACKAY BERLIN looking well and attractive lunching with the attentive Irving. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

May Robson's Latest

By M. E. HANNON

A crusading schoolma'am tilting against the town's gamblers and political big-wigs is May Robson's newest role in "Grand Old Girl," current film at the RKO Keith Boston.

Although it lacks the rowdy gusto of "Lady for a Day" and "Lady by Choice," Miss Robson contrives to make a pleasant thing of her role as Laura Bayles, headmistress of the Avondale High School. She is battling the town gambler, Alan Hale, who runs a soda parlor for the high school kiddies with a dice game in the back room for the convenience, it is presumed, of the junior and senior classes.

Pleasant in its earlier sequences when comedy is given its head, "Grand Old Girl" suffers towards the end from undue sentimentality, and even the skilled Miss Robson is hampered.

An elaborate stage show is seen this week with Ranny Weeks and Duke McHale as "Champagne Cocktail" Company heading the bill.

'Sequoia' Tops All Animal Films

By JOYCE DANA

"Sequoia," a beautifully photographed and intensely interesting story of a strange friendship between wild animals, took over the screen at Loew's State yesterday.

If you have had an aversion for animal pictures, "Sequoia" will dispel it. If the out-of-doors and its four-legged inhabitants have proved engrossing film fare, you will find in "Sequoia" the most natural, dramatic and touching animal picture in many seasons.

While the names programed are headed by Jean Parker and Russell Hardie, these two attractive humans are merely incidental. Even their budding romance, inspired while the girl is tugging a baby puma under one arm and a tiny doe under the other, is of little importance.

Your concern will be for "Mallbu," the deer, and "Gato," the puma. Sharing their infantile moreakfasts in the mountain lodge of Matthew Martin and his daughter Toni, these two oddly assorted creatures establish a friendship that endures through all the drama and danger of the forest.

Every child should see "Sequoia," and every grown-up with even the vaguest fondness for animals, will want to. It's a distinct and unusual triumph, a dramatic and enthralling yarn.

Harding Talents Again Triumph

By HARRIS MORGAN

All the charm and sweetness of "Enchanted April," one of the famous Elizabeth novels, has been admirably recaptured on the screen at the Keith Memorial.

The cool, calm beauty of Ann Harding perfects the transformation. For, while the story is as light as a will o' the wisp, with neither melodramatics nor mysteries, it gives the blonde star a setting eminently suited to her lady-like talents.

Four lonely ladies, one old, one bored and two neglected, take over a villa at San Salvatore for one glorious April. The witchery of the soft Italian moonlight, the staff of quite captivating servants and Miss Harding's incurably romantic optimism work miracles.

The grumpy old lady gives up reverence for dead poets for a genuine liking for her present companions. The two wives are restored to their repentant husbands' arms, and the fourth of the unhappy quartet has her ennui dissolve in the sunshine of pervading content.

Reginald Owens, taking a "hearth" under difficulties, gives one of the funniest scenes on screen records. Frank Morgan, Katharine Alexander, Jane Baxter and Ralph Forbes appear in the excellent cast.

HITLER Strengthens CONTROL

TO RULE AS SOLE BOSS OF NAZIS

(Copyright, 1935, by Internation News Service.)

Berlin, Jan. 19—Adolf Hitler, fuehrer and chancellor of the German Reich, intends to rule Germany as its sole boss in accordance with Nazi ideals during the next two years and hopes during this time limit to complete the framework of a new German Constitution, which will definitely set the Fatherland's house in order.

This is the guiding political goal of Hitler, whose position as Fuehrer and Chancellor has been made a life-time job and is, according to Minister of the Interior Wilhelm Frick's own words, much stronger than the position of any sovereign.

Dr. Frick, one of the foremost exponents of the Nazi regime in Germany's outlined the Fuehrer's policy to International News Service in an exclusive interview.

Dr. Frick revealed that after the two years have elapsed and the four years Hitler requests requested for his regime at the beginning of his rule will be over, the German people will probably be called upon to pass a verdict on the regime and its achievements in the shape of a plebiscite or a general vote.

Dr. Frick told International News Service that the Fuehrer did not neglect to take into consideration unforeseen developments like his own demise, and therefore reserved for himself the right to name his own successor, who will in all probability be a certain leading figure among the present selection of men who rule Germany.

Dr. Frick pointed out he is not in a position to confirm or deny the existence of a political testament in which Hitler is supposed to have named his successor.

Dr. Frick stated that the Reichstag will not be abolished, but that no upper House will be created, as some reports alleged.

In discussing the question of citizens' rights in the future, Dr. Frick declared that in accordance with the National Socialist doctrine, the right to vote would be preserved for Germans of "pure blood" only, intimating thereby non-Ayrans might lose voting rights.

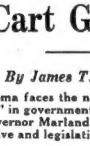
James T. Williams Says:

Oklahoma Will End Ox-Cart Government

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Oklahoma faces the novel experience of getting "a square deal" in government if its newly-elected chief executive, Governor Marland, succeeds in carrying out the administrative and legislative program he is formulating.



Gov. Marland

Because he believes in putting "first things first" this progressive governor will ask the legislature to reorganize the judicial system of the state. He intends to work for the establishment of a state court which will try all the felony cases and eliminate the delays in Oklahoma from the expense and inquities inflicted on them by a large number of local courts.

To police the state, he proposes the creation of a state constabulary which will strive for closer cooperation with the federal government and the governments of neighboring states in a well-organized and intelligent warfare on crime.

In an effort to rid the state of those parasitical politicians who barter away state offices to pay political debts and build up political machines Governor Marland will call upon the Legislature to enact a civil service law that will establish the merit system for the entire public service of the state.

NO NEW TAXES

Instead of resorting to new taxes, Governor Marland will endeavor to revive old economies to pay a large part of the present improvements in state government to which he is committed.

Already he has at work revenue and taxing committees and a budget committee under mandate to submit to him within the next three months a new taxation system for Oklahoma which will distribute fairly the tax burden among all the people of the state, who are expected to share in the fruits of a well-ordered and honest administration of state affairs.

Instead of outlawing the business men of the state as suspicious characters to be watched, Governor Marland has called in their leading experts to assist him with advice and counsel in the solution of the state problems with which his administration is wrestling.

Under his leadership, a statewide effort is in progress to quicken state pride among all sorts and conditions of law-abiding citizens in Oklahoma.

Fifty thousand dollars has already been contributed voluntarily toward the Governor's "Good Government" fund. This fund will be used in part to defray the expense of the State survey which the Governor has ordered of Oklahoma's governmental agencies.

SETS FINE EXAMPLE

Meantime the Governor has set in motion machinery for close cooperation in Its efforts to assist Oklahoma in relieving the destitute and in providing and in encouraging the establishment of subsistent homesteads throughout the State for citizens in need of work and eager for work.

Senators and Representatives in Congress from Oklahoma are beginning to hear from the people of their State about the Governor's program. If public sentiment continues to roll up in support of the Governor's leadership he need not be afraid of any criticism from the Oklahoma delegation in Congress.

A governor who devotes himself whole-heartedly and unselfishly to the reorganization of State government, generally develops a strength among his own people that commands the respect of most of the Representatives of the State in the two houses of the National Congress, such a governor is always stronger with the people than any Senator or Representative.

What Governor Marland is undertaking to do is to overthrow the ox cart system of government, for which the pork-barrel politicians of his state are chiefly to blame, and to supplant this obsolete system with an honest and responsive administration of state affairs.

Forty-three of the forty-eight state legislatures are now in session and will soon convene. Under the leadership of a strong governor, committed to a progressive program, other states face the opportunity of emulating the example of Governor Marland of Oklahoma.

In every other state where the legislature meets this year a progressive governor with the courage and the intelligence to lead can overthrow government of, by and for political parasites and re-establish a truly representative government of the people.

HARD COAL CODE to Be Abandoned

Washington, Jan. 19 (INS)—Absolute abandonment of the proposed anthracite coal code by the NRA was announced today. The announcement is the first official action on the part of the recovery administration that any industry could not be placed under a code of fair competition.

The NRA, so far however, has been unable to bring the telegraph and telephone industries under a code either by imposition or agreement.

Curley Sees Millions For Navy Yard Jobs

Construction of new shops and equipment at the Navy Yard at a cost of about $4,000,000.

The Governor also announced that President Roosevelt had accepted an invitation to attend the dedication of the new Cape Cod canal bridge on July 21.

Speaking of Hassan's refusal to accept a place on the finance committee, Governor Curley said:

"At the time that I appointed Mr. Hassan, I was not aware that he had a client with business before the finance commission.

"I can merely say that Mr. Hassan did the obvious thing when he realized that he was in the same position that Mr. Money was. That is one thing that we want to avoid on the finance commission.

Hassan had been named by the Governor in place of Charles Moorfield Storey, who was rejected by the council on request of Gov. Curley.

The Governor pointed out that Holland's experience in City Hall had given him the knowledge of municipal affairs, real estate values and welfare problems that he believed to be essential in a Finance Commission member.

Asked about the possibility of Massachusetts Democrats rejecting former Gov. Ely as national committeeman, Gov. Curley said:

"As for Ely, I am taking no stand, but want to point out that it is impossible at this time, as the national board has no less such action, unless the member dies or resigns voluntarily. I mean dies physically."

Governor Curley said he could state positively that former Congressman Peter F. Tague, who accompanied him to Washington, would shortly succeed Postmaster William E. Hurley here, despite efforts in some quarters to have Hurley retained.

Gov. Curley said that the Massachusetts delegation in Congress decided on a united front for the state's benefit, and also decided to co-operate with other New England groups for the general benefit of the region. The Governor said:

"President Roosevelt seemed deeply interested in the Cape Cod canal project. He was heartily in favor of speeding up the completion of the project.

"I suggested that if they doubled the appropriation, instead of having the work extend over a period of years, it could be cut down to two years. By that method they would be able to get better contract figures."

Bandit War Lauded

On the subject of crime, the governor said:

"I introduced Assistant Attorney-General Simpson to United States Attorney-General Cummings and Mr. Hoover (J. Edgar Hoover, of the Department of Justice.)

"They are quite highly in favor of our plan of combatting crime in the Bay State. Massachusetts will be a warm and unwelcome spot for bandits, kidnapers, yeggs and men of such types."

Of the Nantasket Beach development, the governor said:

"The Massachusetts congressional delegation supports the proposal of a glorified Atlantic City board walk at Nantasket Beach.

"The proposed board walk will be 60 feet in width, of concrete, and will extend from Alantic Hill to Point Allerton. It will be a PWA project and will cost $1,-000,000."

Bigger Port Plans

He had his first meeting with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, the governor said, announcing new projects for the Navy Yard. He declared:

"The Navy Department will install at the Charlestown Navy Yard new cranes, electrical units and shops. A machine shop will be erected beside the dry dock at the Army Base.

"Boston Harbor and the turning basin will be dredged so that Boston will be able to accommodate the largest ship afloat.

"A fight has been started with the Interstate Commerce Commission to remove charges now levied by steamship lines for the storage of freight while awaiting shipment.

"In New York, the lines allow shippers to store goods on the docks for a period as long as 30 days. In Boston five days is the limit."

RADIO Salute to WAGNER

ROMBERG WILL PAY TRIBUTE

By N. F. T.

As the Saturday night radio highlight, I would say that Sigmund Romberg rates first mention here today, considering his 8 to 9 o'clock offering (WEEI) being designed as it is, to honor the immortal composer, Wagner.

Dramatic background, adapted from Wagner's famous "Tristan and Isolde" is scheduled for arrangement under Romberg direction..

Of somewhat similar character is the "Roxy" presentation (WNAC) holding forth through the 8 to 8:45 period this evening. The genial "Roxy" chooses to likewise pay tribute to a friend and fellow patron of the musical art, namely Rudolph Friml. This and so the "Roxy" setting is "Firmiliana" for its program title.

N. F. T.

RURAL REFLECTION

Earlier, or at 7 tonight to be exact, that weekly "Rural Sketch" effort, centering around "Snow Village" and starring Parker Fennelly with Arthur Allen, reflects upon "Kissin Bridges" as country folks called covered bridges when buggy courtships brought joy to young hearts. This re-enactment by radio is labeled "The Great Bridge Feud" although moderns will find it has nothing to do with trumping a partner's ace.

Jessica Dragonette, popular network soprano, occupies the guest artist spotlight (WBZ) when clock strikes 9 this evening, meaning while the "Radio City Party" festivities are in full swing. Frank Black's orchestra provides the music.

DEVOTED DAD

Children of Giovanni Martinelli, residing in Rome, will spend the evening listening to the Metropolitan Opera staging by radio this afternoon (WEEI) after 1:45 p. m. Dad is the leading tenor's role and when it's between noon and sundown in America, it's night time in Italy.

An interesting battle of local dance music maestros is slated for airing at Boston Garden ten days hence—on the 30th, as the music men Ruby Newman and Jack (Barclay) Marchard are stacked in a "battle of melody" for the President's Ball merrymakers that night.

STYLES Rule Auto SHOW

STREAM LINES STAND OUT

Stream lines, center rides, comfort and color are the keynotes of the automobile for 1935.

The Automobile Show opened today at the Mechanics Building, heralding what manufacturers say will be the "greatest year in automotive history."

More changes in body styles, more refinements in mechanical operation, more attention to the "owner dollar" have been wrought into the new cars than ever before.

"The values this year are greater than ever before, and the prices, on the whole, are lower, bringing the automobile of 1935 within the reach of the average man.

"It's a style year. Style has become just as important in automobiles as in milady's hats. The 1935 automobile has style."

The hours today are 1 p. m. to 10:30 p. m., as they will be all next week. Tomorrow the show will be open from 2 to 7 p. m.

Radio Questions, Answers

Q—Where does the voice of "Beetle" the "haunter" with Phil Baker come from, the studio? Who is it? H. M. C. Dedham.

A—It's produced from a separate "mike" in the control room. Opinion is quite unanimous that announcer John S. Young does the "voice" stooging.

Q—Will you make note to tell three boys of Braintree, who "Bobby Benson" chap is and his "Jane"? Also the Four Western programs, Ten Year Old Trio.

A—He is Edward Wragge, 10 years old, Winifred Toomey, 15 years old is "Jane" of the Tom Mix turns and they attend movies together often.

Q—Is it true that Governor Curley has a record made of every talk he gives on the air? N. S. A. Newton.

A—He has never been known to order such a transcription made of any talk.

Q—What has become of the Four Marx Brothers? Fan for Fun, Salem.

A—They are dividing time between New York and Hollywood, also (2) are out some new radio ideas, hoping to be back as broadcasters soon.

Q—Did we read in your column that Ruth Etting is about to be airing her voice again shortly?

Ruth Rooters, of Roslindale.

A—You probably did, it has been made known. Next Thursday evening is the date, keep an eye on the program listings for time and station.

Q—Does the manager of a broadcasting station see every program on paper before it is permitted to go on the air? Are jokes ever censored and can a station be sued for false statements?

Listener, of Lawrence.

A—Program directors inspect all material. Often a funny story not believed in good taste, is read out. Yes, indeed; a number of suits have been filed and won as a result of "mike" mis-statements.

Traders Are Recovering Serenity

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Wall Street has recovered most of its serenity, but isn't at all disposed to be energetic about it. The market received a little jab from the Radio preferred dividend, yet most stocks seem indifferent and disposed to wait.

Fears of a bad break on top of what happened earlier in the week have pretty well disappeared. This, though, is attracting only a smattering of buying in special issues.

The boys in Chicago are talking dollar wheat again, indicating they have their courage back.

Quite a change from a few days ago, when they were scared green; and maybe they won't be so brave if the Supreme court rules against the government.

Heavy sales of flour are becoming important influence and have brought millers into the grain pit in a big way . . . It was about a year ago that the railroads were running into heavy expenses for snow removal, which reached its peak in February. They must all be praying that the winter winds up as mild as it started.

The understanding now is that Radio "B" is going to get a "break" as soon as possible . . .

The "A" got all that was coming to it yesterday . . . When the common stock will fit into the picture nobody knows, and not very many seem to care—except the common holders . . .

The boys who are well posted say Humble Oil, Standard of New Jersey's big crude company, made more in the first nine months of 1934 than in all of 1933.

Most of the recent speculative enthusiasm for the motors has cooled, awaiting some indication of how earnings are coming along.

GOOD Start ON 'SOCIAL' Plan

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University

New York, Jan. 19—On the whole, it seems fair to say that in his "social insurance" scheme the President has made a good start. At least, it is better than many had feared.

Allowance is made for depressed business conditions in that charges are made relatively low to start with. Some caution concerning the strain on government credit is shown.

ACT TO Check BANKING Cliques

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The Federal Reserve Board seems determined to prevent formation of monopolies or cliques on the directorates of the various banks and their branches. First step is suggestion of rotation and limitation of term of membership.

Financial observers see the move as the first by the new Federal Reserve head, Marriner S. Eccles. The board itself appoints three of the nine directors for each of the 12 reserve banks and either two or three of the directors of each branch, depending on whether the membership is twelve, seven. It announces it will follow its own suggestion by limiting consecutive service to six years. It will also make known its appointments from representative leaders in commerce and industry, rather than bankers interests. Rules are changed so banks may also follow this latter policy.

* * *

A broadened interest in the affairs of the Federal Reserve through the appointment of business and industrial leaders may prove to be the perfect antidote for Central Bank schemes. If only because it will acquaint the rest of the community with the problems of banking which have heretofore been restricted to the profession. Then, too, it will go a long way toward negativing arguments that the reserve banks are private affairs more concerned with serving themselves than the public. We cannot help but think the step will broaden interest and promote a better understanding.

* * *

Shorts: The pension talk has hurt the rails more than any other group . . . Already fighting one pension plan, they and those who own them were somewhat bewildered by the latest plan which would add considerably to their burden . . . But generally the pension plan calling for state help struck a responsive chord . . . It means that the small contributors to the federal tax pool will get a return out of taking out many times what they put in.

* * *

Preferred stocks are taking an important place on the tape these days. Gradually the effect of these issues rarely subjected to concentrated trader attention is reassuring. Since it is probably indicative of investor interest and reflects a desire to put money to work. For next to the huge totals of cash held in various banks have been idle and shown little intention of going to work. Lack of confidence prevented it. With the change now apparent there is reason to take heart.

* * *

Notes: The value of all listed preferreds as shown in the New York Stock Exchange bulletin is about at the high levels of 1933 . . . There are still many fine opportunities and we repeat our advice of a few weeks ago to study the department carefully . . . The cigarette derby for 1935 is on and one may expect a strong bid to oust last year's leader . . . With the good earnings piled up in 1934 advertising outlays are likely to be generous and fresh highs in sales are seen.

* * *

The spread at confidence in financial circles while not of astounding proportions is steady. There is still much in the administrative program that does not satisfy. But generally such steps as are now contemplated are regarded as necessary. Leftist tendencies are accepted with the idea that lacking administration guidance Congress might fall easily in line with schemes of out and out Socialists.

The winn-ahs!

Today's Boston Evening American publishes the names of those who were successful in identifying last week's "About Faces" series, and answering questions about their favorite stage and screen stars. You, too, can share in the weekly $25 in cash awards by entering this fascinating Hollywood contest NOW!

Clues to the above drawn Hollywood actress and actresses may be found at the famous Lynn Paramount Theater where Manager J. J. Dempsey presents the two splendid pictures, "Evelyn Prentice" and "The Gay Bride." Visit this popular Paramount Theater and you will be able to solve the "About Faces" cartoon, readily.

Fill in the identifications in the squares beneath their drawings. These squares equal the number of letters in their names. Use the letter "C" as a guide. Mail your ENTIRE week's solutions to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Second Prize, $3: Mrs. C. F. Hanson, 14 Medfield street, Boston.

Third Prize, $2: George Hurley, 115 Vassal street, Quincy.

Pearle Baxter, 49 Kimball road, Watertown.

Fred Reed, 124 Orchard street, Somerville.

Dorothy Towne, 131 Chatham street, East Lynn.

Seymour Bohn, 29 Dewey street, Roxbury.

Edythe Reilly, 1535 Center street, Roslindale.

Elda Scottillo, 393 Langley road, Newton Centre.

William Mirabello, 35 Lamson street, East Boston.

M. Courtney, 56 Fish avenue, Lynn.

Mrs. G. Fabiniera, 6 Frederick terrace, Dorchester.

Mrs. George Morrill, 32 Nason street, Maynard.

Catherine Sullivan, 4 Gordon street, North Quincy.

Alford Tavernier, 26 Olive street, Springfield.

Marion Johns, 49 Dearborn street, Medford.

Dolly Millen, 830 Salem, street, Malden.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO C. C. PINCKNEY

JULY 8, 1796.

"It is a fact too notorious to be denied, that the greatest embarrassments under which the administration of this Government labors, proceed from the counteraction of people among ourselves, who are more disposed to promote the views of another nation than to establish national character of their own."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Take the Car—Take the Road—Take the Family

MR. HARDING'S admirable picture, above, showing "The Road to Health and Happiness," is printed in the Boston Evening American to remind readers that the greatest of material blessings is a good automobile, and no time should be lost in inspecting the wonderfully efficient, highly perfected automobiles of 1935, AND GETTING ONE OF THEM.

Thanks to the automobile, a man and his family, UNITED in their enjoyment, conquer the law of gravitation, overcome distance, defeat the limitations of time.

As Mr. Harding's beautiful picture shows, when you "Take the Car, the Road and the Family," you leave far behind, in a few moments, the narrow canyons and tall buildings of the city. And then, all the wide country, all the beauty of nature, and all the grandeur of your native land become your playground.

An automobile to an American family is what wings are to a bird, and more. Birds scatter and fly off separately. The family in the automobile remains united, share in pleasures together. The enjoyment of each is increased by that of all the others.

* * *

NOTHING could be more beautiful than a family trip through the beautiful American countryside in a modern perfected literally perfect American automobile.

The father drives, explains what is important to the older children. The young children do their own exploring and observing. They count the number of cows seen in pastures, count "white horses," vie with each other in identifying different makes of automobiles, or play a game in which the child that first sees a cat sitting in a window is the winner.

The grandparents look after the small children and, if there are too many even for the modern roomy car, take some on their laps.

All along the road are all possible conveniences, from the modest "hot dog" stand, to the elaborate restaurant. And on every important corner there is "refreshment" for the automobile, gas and oil, with attendants extraordinarily obliging.

The miles, villages and towns slip by, hundreds of miles in a single day, if the head of the family chooses, miles and hours of happiness, education, intimate "close-up" acquaintance with your own country.

* * *

DO not fail, NOW, to see the exhibition of 1935 automobiles at the annual "Automobile Show."

Take your family to see the new cars in Mechanics Building, examine the new models, let the young people study automobile mechanism, as shown in ingeniously exposed chassis.

See everything that is offered, all the new developments in safety, beauty, comfort and economy of operation. They will amaze you.

SEE THE 1935 AUTOMOBILE MODELS WITH YOUR FAMILY, AND THEN RIDE IN ONE WITH YOUR FAMILY, and know the joy of modern motoring in its highest perfection.

* * *

THE automobile is the American "SECOND HOME."

It is the home on wheels, that flies, the home for all the family connecting the old-fashioned stationary home with every spot in this glorious country.

The automobile connects the home with the Pacific Coast, the warm waters of Southern Florida and the Gulf, with the snows, skating and skiing of the North woods.

It was a fine thing for Napoleon to say, when someone mentioned difficult circumstances:

"Circumstances, I MAKE circumstances."

The owner of an automobile CREATES his circumstances, choosing his own environment, and direction. And good roads lead everywhere in this fortunate country.

* * *

All that the children have read in school, about American geography, their father can show them on the spot—great National Parks, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, the Spouting Geysers of the Yellowstone, the wide plains of Texas, the wonders of giant Boulder Dam, built to treasure up the waters of the Colorado River, giant redwood trees of California, older than the Christian religion, the glistening white beauty of Pike's Peak, the glory of Southern citrus groves, the thundering power of Niagara. Everything is brought within reach of your front door, by the time and distance-conquering AUTOMOBILE.

* * *

AN automobile wisely used doubles life and multiplies its value and its pleasures by ten. It actually does "double life" because life consists of time and the use we make of it. In a swiftly moving automobile, every hour is doubled.

The automobile carries you close to your country, bringing you in direct contact with your fellow citizens far and near.

You stop and speak to them, escaping from the limitations to which families were confined before the automobile came.

It has been truly said that the most important thing in the world is "human liberty" and that liberty, which is freedom of movement and of decision, is the automobile's gift to the people of America.

* * *

SEE the new cars of 1935 and GET one.

If you have thought "I shall not get the new car this year," go to the exhibition and let the extraordinary improvements, refinements, beauty, convenience and economy achieved in the past 12 months convince you that you were mistaken.

The automobile is "the suit of clothes" of the entire family.

Let it be a HANDSOME suit of clothes, worthy of the family, and a NEW suit of clothes, in the FASHION, up with the times. Let it be a new car, combining beauty, speed and economy. Begin the NEW YEAR with a NEW CAR. Of all man's blessings nothing is so cheap in proportion to the pleasure it brings to every member of the family, nothing is so durable, so inspiring as the automobile. No man wearies of seeing his own country, or of travelling through its beauties.

Take the advice that Mr. Harding gives in this beautiful picture. "Take the Car, Take the Road, Take the Family" and all be happy together.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

It is no surprise that the Saarlanders have voted themselves back to the Reich. Blood is thicker than anti-Hitler venom.

But we have a change of sovereignty only and the political solution, if such it is, will leave an economic problem which apparently will be intensified rather than alleviated by the plebiscite.

The Versailles Treaty gave to France the Saar coal mines, and since 1919 they have produced for France 175,000,000 tons of coal. Germany, under the treaty, may buy back the mines—they do not pass with the sovereignty—and in the post-war years Germany has built an internal economy energized and sustained by the Saar coal.

The entire Nazi adventure, today and tomorrow, depends on coal. Hitlerism is being fluxed in a blast furnace, and if the fires go out, it is just a chunk of slag.

France and Germany have reached a tentative agreement on the amount to be paid for the mines, but it is now indicated that the transfer of the Saar to German rule will make it hard for the mines to pay their way and continue to sustain German trade and industry.

Germany's effective use of the Saar coal, as it builds a new state in a matrix of steel, depends upon the Lorraine ore, held by France.

Since 1919, this interchange of coal and iron has gone along nicely without tariffs, and Germany, with its mastery of scientific technique and cheap and docile labor, has competed in the world's markets for steel products, from heavy duty machinery to instruments of precision, with skill and effectiveness.

But tariffs, according to expert observers, seriously will affect the differential of profit which may mean life or death to Nazi Germany, with Germany owning the coal, and France the iron.

There are 820,000 persons in the 730 square miles of the Saar Valley, an area smaller than the state of Rhode Island. There is virtually no agriculture in this blasted pockmarked area. Its sustenance and its hope lies in the continued profitable flux of Saar coal and Lorraine iron, which tariffs may set apart again.

Alsace and Lorraine and the Saar Valley, with the juncture of coal and iron, are a natural economic unit. In their divided economic control they offer a perfect laboratory specimen of the virus which now endangers the very survival of Europe.

Hendrik Van Loon

I think it happened two years ago. I remember the facts quite clearly but I have forgotten the date.

A poor, misguided youth decided to make an end to it all. Like so many candidates for suicide he suffered from a delusion of grandeur.

He dearly wanted to play a role of some importance, but being a young man of very ordinary abilities, the world (so he felt) had not done him full justice. And so he would shun the world.

A strange way of getting even, but that type of mentality can think of the strangest things to get even. He wrote a letter in which he announced his intention of jumping from a certain bridge across the Hudson.

He asked that his demise be given front-page publicity in a prominent New York paper, which he mentioned by name. Then he jumped.

He was only partly successful. He did manage to remove himself from this earth. But the paper in question gave him only a few lines on page 27.

Now we go back a few hundred years. It was the year 1537. Lorenzino dei Medici, a very poor specimen of that illustrious name, had just murdered his distant cousin Alessandro, the dictator of Florence.

He had invited him to his house to take a nap, as Alessandro was tired and felt the need of a little rest. As soon as he was asleep on Lorenzino's own bed, he was killed by a hired gangster.

Lorenzino then hastily pinned a piece of paper bearing the words "the love of one's country conquers all" on the corpse, and fled to Venice.

There he spent his leisure hours penning a lengthy and elaborate apology in which he asked his fellow men not to judge him but to honor him as a second Timoleon, the Greek hero who had gained such great renown by killing his own brother who had made himself dictator of the city of Corinth.

Another misguided young man, who came to a bad end at the age of thirty-two, when in turn he was assassinated by Alessandro's successor. But a perfect example of the born publicity hound who is willing to risk everything, life included, for a mess of short-lived fame.
